TWENTY-FOUR HOUR RECORD.

Joe Dawson in a Chalmers car made a world's record for twenty-four hours by running 1,9004 miles on the Sheepshead Bay speedway Aug. 2, 1917. The best previous record was 1.819 miles by Ralph Mulford on the same track May 1-2, 1916.

ONE-HOUR RECORD.

Driving a Packard on the Sheepshead Bay speedway at New York Nov. 12, 1917, Ralph de Palma made 112.4 miles in one hour. The best previous record was 107 miles by Jean Chassagne on the Brooklands track, England, in 1010 in 1910.

TRANSCONTINENTAL RECORDS.

The coast to coast records were established in 1916. In order of their occurrence the performances were as follows:

Robert Hammond in an Empire car drove from San Francisco to New York, a distance by the route taken of 3.384 miles, in 6 days 10 hours 59 minutes May 16-23. This lowered the record set the previous week by a Cadillac eight cylinder car, which made the trip from Los Angeles to New York in 7 days 11 hours 52 minutes. 11 hours 52 minutes.

Driving a Marmon 34, S. B. Stevens arrived in San Francisco at 5 p. m., July 29, just 5 days 18 hours 30 minutes out from New York city.

W. F. Sturm, driving a Hudson Super-Six, made the distance from San Francisco to New York in 5 days 3 hours 31 minutes Sept. 13-18 and then made the return trip, in 5 days 18 and then made the return trip in 5 days 17 hours 32 minutes, making the time for the round trip 10 days 21 hours 3 minutes. The distance traveled was 6,592 miles.

CHICAGO-NEW YORK RECORD,

"Cannonball" Baker made the distance between New York and Chicago, 1,045 miles by the route he took, in 26 hours 50 minutes, June 23-24, 1920. The run was made in a Templar car under the auspices of the American Automobile association and in the interests of the army recruiting service. The best previous record was 31 hours flat, made in 1916 by B. F. Durham and Al Walden.

YACHTING. THE AMERICA'S CUP.

Record of Races. 1851—Aug. 22. In this, the year of the great exhibition in London, the Royal Yacht Club exhibition in London, the Royal Yacht Club of England offered a cup to the winner of a yacht race around the Isle of Wight. The course was 60 miles in length. The race was won by the schooner yacht America, designed by George Steers for John C. Stevens of the New York Yacht club. The America was 94 feet over all, 88 feet on the water line, 22½ feet beam and 11½ feet draft. There was no time allowance and the competing yachts ranged in size from a three-masted 392-ton schooner, the Brilliant, to the 47-ton cutter the Aurora, which came in second in the race. The time of the America was 10 hours and 34 minutes; that of the Aurora was 24 minutes slower. The cup after that became known as the America's cup and has ever since been successfully defended.

RECORD FOR SPEED.

Brig.-Gen. William Mitchell. U. S. A., assistant chief of the air service, on Oct. 18. 1922, set a new official world's speed record when he flew over a one kilometer course at Selfridge field at Mount Clemens, Mich., at an average speed of 224.05 miles an hour in four heats. The test was timed by representatives of the Federation Aeronautique Internationale, making the record official.

Gen Mitchell down an army Curtiss plane

Gen. Mitchell drove an army Curtiss plane in which Lieut. Maughan won the Pulitzer speed trophy at the same place, Oct. 14, and in which he later drove unofficially at a speed of 248.5 miles an hour. While Lieut. Maughan's speed was faster than that made by Gen. Mitchell and was under United States army regulations, no representatives of the Federation Aeronautique Internationale wers it, a fact which prevented the mark standing as an official world's speed present. from record.

The former record recognized by the federation was made in France Sept. 21, 1922, by Sadi Lecointe who piloted his machine at an average speed of 213 miles an hour.

GLIDING RECORDS.

Making sustained airplane flights without the aid of engines was one of the interesting developments in aviation in 1922. The machines started by man or horse power from machines, started by man or horse power from the summit of some lofty hill, would remain in the air for many minutes and even rise to a higher altitude than that from which they started. Capt. F. P. Raynham in the vicinity of Lewes, England, on Oct. 17, 1922, remained in the air 1 hour 53 minutes and rose to an altitude of 300 feet above the starting point. The record of the year, however, was made by M. Maneyrolle, a French airman who kept a monoplane flyer in the air at Firle, England, Oct. 21, 1922, for 3 hours and 22 minutes. German airmen also made some creditable German airmen also made some creditable gliding records in the course of the year and started the competition which resulted in the foregoing records being made. Herr Hentzen, a student flyer, was especially successful.

TRANSOCEANIC FLIGHTS

Capts, Saedura and Coutinho of the Portuguese navy flew in a hydroaeroplane from Lishon, Pertugal, to Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, the flight beginning on March 30 and ending on June 17. The course was by way of the Canary islands, Cape Verde islands, St. Paul rocks and Fernando Noronha island. The total distance covered was 3.490 miles and would have been made in a few days had the aviators not lost two machines in stormy weather, causing long delays before new ones could be secured.

could be secured.
Capt. John Alcock and Lieut. Arthur W.
Brown. British aviators, crossed the Atlantic ocean June 14-15, 1919, from Newfoundland to Ireland, covering a distance estimated at 1,960 miles. The NC-4 of the American navy made a flight of 1,219 miles in crossing the Atlantic from Newfoundland to the Azores May 16-17, 1919. The British dirigible R-34, which crossed the Atlantic from east to west and west to east in July, 1919, holds the record for the longest nonstop flight by a craft of that type—more than 3,200 miles.

RECORD FOR ENDURANCE.

Lieuts, John A. MacReady and Oakley Kelly, flying a large monoplane, the T-2, circled over San Diego, Cal. Oct. 5-6, 1922, for 35 hours 18 minutes and 30 seconds without making a landing. This exceeded all other records for sustained flights by heavier than air machines.

The same aviators on Nov. 3-4, 1922, attempted to fly from San Diego to New York without a stop, but were compelled to land at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind., after covering a distance of 2,060 miles, owing to a defect in the water supply arrangement. They had only about 700 miles over to go to reach had only about 700 miles more to go to reach

New York city.
Lieut. James H. Doolittle flew from Jacksonville, Fla. to San Diego, Cal. on Sept. 5-6, in 21 hours 18 minutes, with only one stop—at San Antonio, Tex., for fuel. The distance traveled was 2,275 miles.

AVIATION DISASTERS. Destruction of the Roma.

The army dirigible air-ship Roma was wrecked on the afternoon of Feb. 21, 1922, near the Hampton roads (Va.) army base, with a loss of thirty-four lives. Out of with a loss of infrity-four lives. Out of forty-five men aboard only eleven were saved and most of these received severe injuries. The dirigible was up about 1,000 feet when the steering apparatus broke. Out of control, the craft fell rapidly toward the ground and striking high tanging electric wires was set. striking high tension electric wires was set on fire in an instant. Those who were in a position to jump did so when the craft was near the ground. Those who could not jump were almost instantly crushed or burned to death.

The flight was for the purpose of testing six Liberty engines which had been substituted for the Italian motors with which the ship was originally supplied. A spring cruise had been planned and in anticipation of this the helium gas in the b g had been pumped out helium gas in the b g had been pumped out into tanks and hydrogen substituted. Had the helium been used the fire would not have occurred, as it is not inflammable. The Roma, in charge of Capt. Dale Mabry, with a full complement of officers and men and a few civilian guests, went aloft at 1:30 p.m. She cruised around for nearly fifty minutes and everything seemed to be going well. The new motors seemed to be acting perfectly. Then the cable to the box kite construction at the stern, a vital part of the elevating apparatus, gave way. The Roma lurched sideways and then, in spite of all that Capt. Mabry and Lieut. B. G. Burt, at the control wheels, could do the giant airship plunged to the ground, caught fire and burned so fiercely that for some minutes no one could approach near enough to resist those beneath the wreckage. When finally search was possible only the charred bodies of the victims ould be found. could be found.

The dead included Maj. John G. Thornell, air service: Maj. Walter W. Vautsmeier, coast artillery, assigned to air service: Capt. Dale Mabry, air service: C. pt. George D. Watts, infantry, assigned to air service: Capt. Allen P. McFarland, air service: Capt. Frederick iniantry, assigned to air service; Capt. Allen P. McFarland, air service; Capt. Frederick R. Durrschmidt, air service; Lieuts. John R. Hall. Wallace C. Burns, William E. Riley, Clifford E. Smythe, Wallace C. Cummings, Ambrose V. Clinton and Harold K, Hine, all of the air service; twelve sergeants, four privates and five civilians.

The survivors included Maj, John D. Reardon, Capt, Walter J. Reed, Lieut. Clarence H. Welch. Lieut. Byron T. Burt. Jr., three sergeants, one corporal and three civilians.

The Roma was built in Italy and was purchased by the United States early in 1921 for $200,000. It was the largest semirigid aircraft in the world, the cost of duplicating which, it was said by the war department at the time of its purchase, would probably be $1,250,000. The ship was of 1,200,000 cubic feet capacity 410 feet long, 82 feet wide, and 88½ feet high It was originally equipped with six twelve-cylinder engines of 400 horse-power each, giving an estimated speed of power each giving an estimated speed of eighty miles an hour and a cruising radius at full speed of 3.300 miles. These engines, however, were replaced with Liberty motors after the airship was brought to the United States.

Tragedy of the Seaplane Miss Miami.

The flying boat Miss Miami, piloted by Robert Moore, left Miami, Fla., at 11:04 a. m., Wednesday, March 22, 1922, for a trip to Bimini, some fifty miles to the eastward in the Atlantic. There were five passengers aboard, Mr. and Mrs. August Bulte and Mrs. Lawrence E. Smith of Kansas City, Mo., and Mrs. John S. Dickson of Memphis. Tenn At 11:41 a. m. when about three Mo., and Mrs. John S. Dickson of Memphis. Tenn. At 11:41 a. m. when about three minutes from Bimini, the propeller became disabled and the boat had to descend to the surface of the water. The waves were high, the hull sprang a leak and the boat turned over, throwing all on board into the sea. The pilot succeeded in getting Mr. and Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Bulte back to the plane, but Mr. Bulte and Mrs. Dickson were drowned before he could help them. A fishing boat was near at hand, but evidently its occupants had not seen the fall of the plane and it changed its course and disappeared. Several other not seen the 1all of the plane and it changed its course and disappeared. Several other beats passed, but not near enough to see the wreck and those clinging to it. He had been fifty-five hours in the water without food or drink. He was brought to Miami and placed in a hospital, where he finally recovered.

Airplane Liners Collide.

Two airplane liners plying between London and Paris met in a head-on collision at 2 p. m. April 7, 1922, over the village of Thieully, seventy miles north of Paris, and both crashed to the ground in flames. One plane was French, bound for London, carrying three passengers in addition to the pilot and mechanician. The other machine was English, bound for Paris, carrying in addition to the pilot one passen.er and a quantity of English, bound for Paris, carrying in addition to the pilot one passenger and a quantity of freight. All those on board the planes lost their lives, six dying instantly and one, the pilot of the British machine, on the following day. The passengers killed were Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Bruce Yule of New York; M. Buriez of Paris, engineer and general manager of the Grande Express Aerienne, and Hesterman Steward of England. Poor visibility caused by low hanging clouds caused the collision.

Sir Ross Smith Killed in Accident.

Sir Ross Smith Intel in Accusent.

Sir Ross Smith, a noted Australian aviator, was killed at Brooklands, England, April 13, 1922, while making a practice flight in anachine which he intended to use in making an aerial circuit of the world beginning April 25. Lieut. Bennett, an engineer who was to have accompanied Sir Ross and his brother Sir Keith Smith on the long journey, was also killed. When some 3,000 feet up in the air the plane, built by the Vickers company, got out of control, went into a spin and hit the earth with such force that it was splintered. Sir Ross was killed instantly and Lieut. Benett died a few moments after the accident.

Sir Ross was killed instantly and Lieut, beinett died a few moments after the accident. Sir Ross Smith, who did good service in the war as an aviator, gained fame in 1919, when with his brother Ketth he won a prize of $50,000 by flying from England to Australia, a distance of 11,500 miles.

Lieut. Maynard Killed.

Lieut. Belvin W. Maynard, internationally known as "the flying parson." and two other aviators with him were killed at Rutland, Yt., Sept. 7, 1922, when the airplane which Maynard was piloting crashed to the earth and was demolished. The other victims were Lieut. Norman Wood and Lieut. Louis Minette. All died instantly. Lieut. Maynard won fame as an airplane tester in France at the time of the war and by his success in winning air rate. war and by his success in winning air races from New York to Toronto and from New York to San Francisco in 1919. He was born Sept. 28, 1892.

Army Dirigible C-2 Burned.

The army dirigible C-2, after making a transcontinental flight from Langley field at Newport News, Va., to California, was destroyed by fire at San Antonio, Tex., Oct. 17, 1922, while on its return trip to the east. The craft had been tak n out of its hangar at Brookfield to make a flight over San Antonio when gusts of wind dragged it along the ground, tearing the fabric of the envelope and causing the hydrogen to catch fire. The whole airshio was quickly consumed. Four of the ten men in the car of the balloon suffered broken bones when they jumped to the ground. when they jumped to the ground.

ORDER OF PRESIDENTIAL SUCCESSION.

Following is the act of congress, approved Jan. 19, 1886, providing for the performance of the duties of the office of president in case of the removal, death, resignation or inability both of the president and vice-president of the United States:

"Be it enacted, etc.. That in case of the removal, death. resignation or inability of both the president and vice-president of the resident of state or if United States, the secretary of state, or if there be none, or in case of his removal, death, resignation or inability, then the secretary of the treasury, or if there be none, or in case of his removal, death, resignation or or in case of his removal, death, resignation or inability, then the secretary of war, or if there be none, or in case of his removal, death, resignation or inability, then the attorney-general, or if there be none, or in case of his removal, death, resignation or inability, then the postmaster-general, or if there be none, or in the case of his removal, death, resignation or inability, then the secretary of the navy, or if there be none, or in case of his removal, death, resignation or inability, the secretary of the interior shall act as presithe secretary of the interior shall act as presi-dent until the disability of the president or vice-president is removed or a president shall elected.

"Provided, That whenever the powers and States shall devolve upon any of the persons named herein, if congress by not their nession, or if it should not meet in accordance with law within twenty days thereafter, it shall be the duty of the person upon whom said powers and duties shall devolve to issue a proclamation convening congress extraordinary session, giving twenty day notice of the time of meeting.

That the preceding section shall only be held to apply to such officers as shall of the senate to the offices therein named, and such as are eligible to the office of president under the constitution, and not under impeachment by the house of representatives of the United States at the time the powers and duties of the office shall devolve upon them respectively." them respectively.

It is assumed that should the remote contingency arise that the foregoing cabinet officers are all ineligible or unavailable then the other cabinet officers in the order in which their offices were created will fill the office of president temporarily. Thus the order of succession would be: Secretary of state. Secretary of the treasury. Secretary of war. The attorney-general. The postmaster-general.

The postmaster-general.
Secretary of the navy.
Secretary of the interior.
Secretary of commerce.
Secretary of labor.
Should the man elected president die or in any way become ineligible between the time of the meeting of the electoral college and the following March 4th the vice-president would become president.

THE SULGRAVE INSTITUTION IN AMERICA. Incorporated Nov. 8, 1917.

Chancellor-Alton B. Parker, New York. Treasurer—L. Gordon Hamersley, New Y Secretary—A. B. Humphrey, New York. York. Executive Chairman - John A. Stewart, New York.

York.
Offices—3903 Woolworth building, 233 Broadway, New York.
The Sulgrave institution takes its name from Sulgrave manor, the home of George Washington's ancestors in Northamptonshire, England. This property, including house, outbuildings and about ten acres of land, was purchased in 1913 by a public-spirited body of English men and women, who to show their good will for their kindred in America turned the estate over to a board of trustees to be maintained as a place of pilgrimage for all who venerate the name of George Washington. A resolution authorizing the creation ton. A resolution authorizing the creation of the Sulgrave institution, a society to center in Sulgrave manor, was approved at a meeting of the trustees of the manor held at the American embassy in London, in March, 1914. On Nov. 8, 1917, the Sulgrave Insti-tution of America was incorporated under the laws of Illinois. The chief purposes as set forth in the certificate of incorporation are to foster friendship and to prevent misunderstanding among English speaking peoples; to promote the basic sentiments of democracy and to aid in upholding and maintaining the fundamental institutions of the English speaking ing world and in fostering the ideals which inspired their creation.

On the occasion of the meeting, June 21, 1921, the institution was given by Mrs. Victoria Woodhull Martin, widow of John Martin, London banker, an estate at Bredon's Norton, near Worcester, England, valued at about $200.000, as a work center of the Sulgrave movement. In October, 1922, the institution unveiled memorials of Edmund Burke, William Pitt and James Bryce in Washington, Pittsburgh and New York respectively.

Princess Hermine of Reuss and William II., former emperor of Germany, were married at Doorn castle Nov. 5, 1922. The civil ceremony was performed by the burgomaster of Doorn and the religious ceremony by the Rev. Heinrich Vogel. Princess Hermine was born Dec.

 17. 1887, and was married Jan. 7, 1907. Prince Jean Georges of Schoenaich-Carolath, who died April 6, 1920. The ex-kaiser's first wife. Augusta Victoria, died at Doorn, Holland, April 11, 1921.

PRESIDENT HARDING'S SHIP SUBSIDY MESSAGE.

Delivered at a joint session of the houses of congress on Nov. 21, 1922.

Members of the Congress: Late last February I reported to you relative to the American merchant marine, and recommended legislation which the executive branch of the government deemed essential to promote our merchant marine and with it our national welfare. Other problems were pressing and other questions pending, and for one reason or another, which need not be recited, the suggested legislation has not progressed beyond a favorable recommendation by the house committee.

The committee has given the question a full and painstaking inquiry and study, and I hope its favorable report speedily will be given the force of law.

It will be helpful in clearing the atmosphere if we start with the frank recognition of divided opinion and determined opposition. It is proposals have Like experience. divided the congress on various previous oc-casions. Perhaps a more resolute hostility never was manifest before, and I am very sure the need for decisive action-decisive, favorable action-never was so urgent before.

We are not dealing with a policy founded on theory; we have a problem which is one of grim actuality. We are facing insistent conditions, out of which will come either additional and staggering governmental losses and national impotence on the seas or else the unfurling of the flag on a great American merchant marine commensurate with our commercial importance, to serve as carrier of our cargoes in peace and meet the necessities of our defense in war.

There is no thought here and now to magnify the relation of a merchant marine to our national defense. It is enough to recall that we entered the world war almost wholly dependent on our allies for transportation by sea. We expended approximately $3,000,000,000, feverishly, extravagantly, wastefully and impractically. Out of our eagerness to make up for the omissions of peace and to meet the war emergency we builded and otherwise acquired the best merchant fleet, which the government owns to-day.

In the simplest way I can say it, our immediate problem is not to build and support a merchant shipping, which I hold to be one of the highest and most worthy aspirations of any great people; our problem is to deal with what we now possess. Our problem is to relieve the public treasury of the drain it is already meeting.

Let us omit particulars about the frenzied war-time building. Possibly we did fully as well as could have been done in the anxious Let us pass for the moment tionship between a merchant circumstances. vital relationship marine and a commercially aspiring nation. Aye, let us suppose for a moment the absurdity that with one $3,000,000,000 experience and with the incalculable costs in lives and treasure which may be chargeable to our inability promptly to apply our potency—which God forefend happening again—let us momentarily ignore all of these and turn to note the mere business problem, the practical question of dollars and cents with which we are confronted.

END OF THE WOODEN FLEET.

The war construction and the later complethe war construction and the later completion was to war contracts, where completion was believed to be the greater economy to the public treasury, left us approximately 13,200,000 gross tonnage in ships. The figures are nearer 12,500,000 tons now, owing to the scrapping of the wooden fleet. More than half this tonnage is government owned and approximately in one form or another.

2.250,000 tons are under government operation

The net loss to the United States treasurysums actually taken therefrom in this government operation—averaged approximately $16. 000,000 per month during the year prior to the assumption of responsibility by the present administration. A constant warfare on this loss of public funds and the draft to service of capable business management and experienced operating directors have resulted in applied efficiency and enforced economics.

It is very gratifying to report the diminution of the losses to $4,000,000 per month, or a total of $50,000,000 a year, but it is intolerable that the government should continue a policy from which so enormous a treasury loss is the inevitable outcome. This loss, more is the inevitable outcome. This loss, more-over, attends operation of less than a third of the government-owned fleet.

It is not, therefore, a question of adding new treasury burdens to maintain our shipping; we are paying these burdens now. It is not a question of contracting an outlay to support our merchant shipping, because we are paying already. I am not asking your authorization of a new and added draft on the public treasury; I am appealing for a program to diminish the burden we are already bearing.

When your executive government knows when your executives aggregating $50,000,000 annually, which it believes could be reduced by half through a change of policy, your government would be unworthy of public trust if such a change were not commended; nay, if it were not insistently urged. And the pity of it is that our present ex-penditure in losses is not constructive. It looks to no future attainments. It is utterly ineffective in the establishment of a dependable merchant marine, whereas the encouragement of private ownership and the application of individual initiative would make for a permanent creation, ready and answerable at all times to the needs of the nation.

NO REPLACEMENT PROVISION.

But I have not properly portrayed all the current losses to the public this year. We are wearing out our ships without any provision for replacement. We are having these losses through deterioration now and are charging nothing against our capital account. But the losses are there, and regrettably larger under government operation than under private control

Only a few years of continued losses on capital account will make these losses through depreciation alone exceed the $50,000,000 a year now drawn to cover losses in operation. The gloomy picture of losses does not end even there. Notwithstanding the known war cost is $3,000.000,000 for the present tonnage, I will not venture to appraise its cash value to-day.

It may as well be confessed now as at some later time that in the mad rush to build, in establishing shipyards wherever men would organize to expend government money, when we made shipbuilders over night, quite without regard to previous occupations or pursuits, we builded poorly, often very poorly. Moreover, we constructed without any formulated program for a merchant marine. The war emergency impelled and the cry was for ships, any kind of ships.

The error is recalled in regret rather than criticism. The point is that our fleet, costing approximately $3,000,000,000, is worth only a fraction of that cost to-day. Whatever that fraction of that cost to-day. Whatever that fraction may be, the truth remains that we have no market in which to sell the ships under our present policy, and a program of surrender and sacrifice and the liquidation which is inevitable unless the pending legisla-tion is sanctioned will cost scores of millions

ONCE MARITIME LEADER.

When the question is asked, Why the insistence for the merchant marine act now? the answer is apparent. Waiving every inspiration which lies in a constructive plan for maintaining our flag on the commercial highways of the seas, waiving the prudence in safeguarding against another $3,000.000,000 madness, if war ever again impels, we have the unavoidable task of wiping out a $50,000,000 annual loss in operation and losses aggregating many hundreds of millions in wornout, sacrificed or scrapped shipping.

Then the supreme humiliation, the admission that the supreme numiliation, the admission that the United States—our America, once eminent among the maritime nations of the world—is incapable of asserting itself in the peace triumphs on the seas of the world. It would seem to me doubly humiliating when we own the ships and fail in the genius and capacity to turn their prows toward the marts of the

This problem cannot longer be ignored, its attempted solution cannot longer be postponed. The failure of congress to act decisively will be no less disastrous than adverse action,

THREE COURSES POSSIBLE.

Three courses of action are possible and the choice among them is no longer to be avoided. The first is constructive—enact the pending bill, under which I firmly believe an American merchant marine, privately owned and privately operated but serving all the people and always available to the government in any emergency, may be established and maintained.

The second is obstructive-continue governoperation and attending government losses and discourage private enterprise by government competition, under which losses are met by the public treasury, and witness the continued losses and deterioration until the colossal failure ends in sheer exhaustion.

The third is destructive-involving the sacrifice of our ships abroad or the scrapping of them at home, the surrender of our aspirations and the confession of our impotence to the world in general and our humiliation before world in general and our numination before the competing world in particular.

A choice among the three is inevitable. It is unbelievable that the American people or the congress which expresses their power will consent to surrender and destruction. It is equally unbelievable that our people and the congress which translates their wishes into action will longer sustain a program of obstruction and attending losses to the treasury. I have come to urge the constructive alternative, to reassert an American "we will." I have come to ask you to relieve the responsible administrative branch of the government from a program upon which failure and hope-from a program upon which failure and hopelessness and staggering losses are written for every page and let us turn to a program of assured shipping to serve us in war and to give guaranty to our commercial independence in_peace.

I know full well the hostility in the popular mind to the word "subsidy." It is stressed by the opposition and associated with "special privilege" by those who are unfailing advocates of government aid whenever was numbers are directly concerned. "Government aid." bers are directly concerned. "Government aid" would be a fairer term than "subsidy" in defining what we are seeking to do for our merchant marine, and the interests are those of all the people, even though the aid goes to the few who serve.

If government aid is a fair term—and I think it is—to apply to authorizations aggregating $75,000,000 to promote good roads for market highways it is equally fit to be applied to the establishment and maintenance of American arket highways on the salted seas. If government aid is the proper definition for $15,000,000 to $40,000,000 annually expended to improve and maintain inland waterways in aid of commerce it is a proper designation for a needed assistance to establish and maintain ocean highways where there is actual commerce to examine the commerce to the commerce merce to be carried.

TO SAVE TREASURY.

But call it "subsidy," since there are those who prefer to appeal to mistaken prejudice rather than make frank and logical argument. We might so call the annual loss of $50.000,we might so call the annual 1088 of $500.000.000 which we are paying now without protest by those who most abhor the word, we might as well call that a "subsidy." If so I am proposing to cut it in half, approximately, and to saving thus effected there would be added millions upon millions of further savings millions upon millions of further savings through ending losses on capital account—government capital out of the public treasury, always remember—and there would be at least the promise and the prospect of the permanent establishment of the needed merchant marine.

establishment of the needed merchant marine. I challenge every insinuation of favored interests and the enrichment of the special few at the expense of the public treasury. I am, first of all, appealing to save the treasury. Perhaps the unlimited bestowal of government aid might justify the apprehension of special favoring, but the pending bill, the first ever proposed which carried such a provision, automatically guards against enrichment or perpetuated bestown!

It provides that shipping lines receiving government aid must have their actual investment and their operating expenses audited by the government, that government aid will only be paid until the shipping enterprise earns 10 per cent on actual capital employed and that im-mediately, when more than 10 per cent in earnings is reached, half of the excess earnings must be applied to the repayment of the government aid which had been previously advanced.

Thus the possible earnings are limited to a very reasonable amount if capital is to be risked and management is to be attracted. If success attends, as we hope it will, the government outlay is returned, the inspiration of opportunity to earn remains and American trans-portation by sea is established. Though differing in detail it is not more in proportion to their population and capacity than other great nations have done in aiding the establishment of their merchant marines, and it is timely to recall that we gave them our commerce to aid in their upbuilding, while the American task now is to upbuild and establish in the face of their most active competition. Indeed, the American development will have to overcome every obstacle which may be put in our path, except as international comity forbids.

Concern about our policy is not limited to our own domain, though the interest abroad is of very differing character. I hope it is seemly to say it, because it must be said, the mari-time nations of the world are in complete accord with the opposition here to the pending measure. They have a perfect right to such an attitude. When we look from their viewpoint we can understand. But I wish to stress the American viewpoint.

Ours should be the viewpoint from which one sees American carriers at sea, the dependence of American commerce and American vessels for American reliance in the event of war. Some of the costly lessons of war must be learned again and again, but our shipping lesson in the world war was much too costly to be effaced from the memory of this or future generations.

Not so many months ago the head of a company operating a fleet of ships under our flag called at the executive offices to discuss a permit to transfer his fleet of cargo vessels to a foreign flag, though he meant to continue them in a distinctly American service. He based his request for transfer on the allegation that by such a transfer he could reduce his labor costs alone sufficiently to provide a profit on capital invested. I do not vouch for the accuracy of the statement, nor mean to discuss it.

The allusion is made to recall that in good conscience congress has created by law condi-tions surrounding labor on American ships which shipping men the world over declare result in higher costs of operation under our flag. I frankly rejoice if higher standards for labor on American ships have been established. Morest justice suggests that when congress fixes these standards it is fair to extend government aid in maintaining them until world competition is brought to the same high level or until our shipping lines are so firmly established that they have you'd competitive slope. lished that they face world competition alone.

Ished that they face world competition alone. Having discussed in detail the policy and provisions of the pending bill when previously addressing you, I forbear repetition now. In individual exchanges of opinion not a man in house or senate but has expressed personal sympathy with the purposes of the bill and then uttered a discouraging doubt about the sentiment of constituencies. It would be most discouraging if a measure of such transcending national importance must have its fate depend on geographical occupational professional or on geographical, occupational, professional or partisan objections.

Frankly, I think it loftier statesmanship to support and commend a policy designed to effect the larger good to the nation than merely to record the too hasty impressions of a constituency. Out of the harmonized aspiration, the fully informed convictions and the united efforts of all the people will come the greater republic.

BENEFIT TO ALL SECTIONS SEEN.

Commercial eminence on the seas, ample agencies for the promotion and carrying of our foreign commerce are of no less importance to the people of the Mississippi and the Missouri valleys, the great northwest and the Rocky mountain states than to the seaboard states and industrial communities building inland a thousand miles or more. It is a common cause with its benefits commonly shared.

When people fail in the national viewpoint and live in the confines in community selfishness or narrowness the sun of this republic will have passed its meridian and our larger aspirations will shrivel in the approaching twilight.

But let us momentarily put aside the aspiring and inspiring viewpoint. The blunt, indisputable fact of the loss of $50,000,000 a year under government operation remains; likewise, the fast-diminishing capital account, the enormous wartime expenditure, to which we were forced because we had not fittingly encouraged and hulded as a company of the control of the con and builded as our commerce expanded in peace. Here are facts to deal with, not fancies wrought out of our political and economic disputes.

The abolition of the annual loss and the best salvage of the capital account are of concern to all the people.

It is my firm belief that the combined savings of operating losses and the protection of the capital account through more advantageous sales of our war-built or war-seized ships, because of the favorable policy which the pending bill will establish, will more than pay every dollar expended in government aid for twentyfive years to come.

TRANSPORT OF OCEAN MAILS.

It should be kept in mind that the approximate sum of $5,000,000 annually paid for the transport of ocean mails is no new expenditure.

It should be kept in mind that the loan fund to encourage building is not new; it is the law already, enacted by the essentially unanimous vote of congress. It is only included in the pending bill in order to amend it so as to by the government, whereas the existing law leaves the grant of building loans subject to any whim of favoritism.

It should be kept in mind also that there are assured limitations of the government proposal. The direct aid with ocean carrying maintained at our present participation will not reach at our present participation will not reach $20,000,000 a year and the maximum direct aid, if our shipping is so promoted that we carry one-half our deep-seas commerce, will not exceed $30,000,000 annually. At the very maximum of outlay we should be saving $20,000,000 of our present annual operating loss. If the maximum is ever reached the establishment of our merchant marine will have been definitely recorded and the government-owned fleet fortunately liquidated.

From this point of view it is the simple, incontestable wisdom of businesslike dealing to save all that is possible of the annual loss and avoid the millions sure to be lost to the government's capital account in sacrificing our fleet.

But there is a bigger, broader, more inspiring viewpoint—aye, a patriotic viewpoint. I refer to the constructive action of to-day, which offers the only dependable promise of making our wartime inheritance of ships the foundation of a great agency of commerce in peace and an added guaranty of service when it is necessary to our national defense

Thus far I have been urging government aid to American shipping, having in mind every interest of our producing population, whether of mine, factory or farm, because expanding commerce is the foremost thought of every nation in the world to-day.

I believe in government aid becomingly bestowed. We have aided industry through our tariffs; we have aided railway transportation in land grants and loans; we have aided the construction of market roads and the improvement of inland waterways. We have aided reclamation and irrigation and the development of water power; we have loaned for seed grains in anticipation of harvest; we expend mililions in investigation and experimentation to promote a common benefit, though a limited few are the direct beneficiaries. We have loaned hundreds of millions to promote the marketing of American goods. It has all been commendable and highly worth while.

At the present moment the American farmer is the chief sufferer from the cruel readjust-ments which follow war's inflations, and befitting government aid to our farmers is highly essential to our national welfare. No people may safely boast a good fortune which the No people farmer does not share.

Already this congress and the administrative branch of the government have given willing ear to the agricultural plea for postwar relief and much has been done which has proved helpful. Admittedly it is not enough. Our credit system, under government provision and control, must be promptly and safely broadened to relieve our agricultural distress. To this problem and such others of pressing imthis problem and such others of pressing importance as reasonably may be dealt with in the short session I shall invite your attention at an early day.

I have chosen to confine myself to the specific problem of dealing with our merchant marine, because I have asked you to assemble two weeks in advance of the regularly appointed time to expedite its consideration. The executive branch of the government would feel itself remiss to contemplate our yearly loss and attending failure to accomplish if the conditions were not pressed for your decision.

More, I would feel myself lacking in concern for America's future if I failed to stress the beckoning opportunity to equip the United States to assume a befitting place among the nations of the world whose commerce is inseparable from the good fortunes to which rightfully all peoples aspire.

THE ALDEN KINDRED OF AMERICA.

The descendants of John Alden and his wife, Priscilla Mullins, whose charming romance was made famous in Longfellow's "Courtship of Miles Standish," have organized and there are now five local societies of the Alden Kindred of America. All accept members from any part of the country, while the larger part are residents from sections where meetings are held regularly. The first of these associations, organized in 1900, holds annual meetings in Plymouth or at the old homestead in Duxbury (built in 1653), to which it holds title. The Midwest Chapter Alden Kindred of America, with headquarters in Chicago, was organized in the fall of 1911 by Caroline Alden Huling of 428 Belden avenue and has held regular monthly meetings in Chicago since then, with two general reunions—a picnic on July 4 and The descendants of John Alden and his wife, a dinner to celebrate Forefathers' day, in December. Over 100 ceruficates have been issued to persons proving descent from John and Priscilla Alden, who came in the Mayflower. Frank A. Alden, president of the Garfield Park State bank, 4001 West Madison street, is president and Jesse A. Cook, 902 North Massasjit avenue, is secretary. It is estimated that there are several bundred members of the fam. there are several hundred members of the familly in Chicago and vicinity.

The Alden Kindred of New York and vicinity, formed in May, 1921, with John Alden Seabury as its first president and founder, now numbers many distinguished persons on its list and holds monthly meetings during the win-ter. There is another organization in Bing-hamton, N. Y., which has held annual re-unions for many years.

Courts of Justice-Rights of Judges; New Appointments.

Art. 73. Subject to the constitution and to the extent to which they are not inconsistent therewith, the laws in force in the Irish Free State (Saorstat Eireann) at the date of the coming into operation of this constitution shall continue to be of full force and effect until the same or any of them shall have been repealed or amended by enactment of the parliament.

Art. 74. Nothing in this constitution shall affect any liability to pay any tax or duty payable in respect of the financial year current the date of the coming into operation of this constitution or any preceding financial year, or in respect of any period ending on or before the last day of the said current financial year, or payable on any occasion financial year, or payable on any occasion happening within that or any preceding year, or the amount of such liability; and during the said current financial year all taxes and duties and arrears thereof shall continue to be assessed, levied and collected in like manner in assessed, levied and collected in like manner in all respects as immediately before this constitu-tion came into operation, subject to the like adjustments of the proceeds collected as were theretofore applicable; and for that purpose the executive council shall have the like powers and be subject to the like liabilities as the provisional government. Goods trans-ported during the said current financial year from or to the Irish Free State to or from any part of Great Britain or the Isle of Man shall not, except so far as the executive council shall not, except so far as the executive council may otherwise direct in respect to the forms to be used and the information to be furnished, be treated as goods exported or imported, as the case may be.

For the purpose of this article, the expression "financial year" means, as respects income tax (including supertax) the year of assessment, and as respects other taxes and duties, the year ending on the thirty-first day March. of

Art. 75. Until courts have been established for the Irish Free State (Saorstat Eireann) in accordance with this constitution, the Supreme Court of Judicature, County courts, courts of Quarter Sessions and courts of Summary Jurisdiction, as at present existing, shall for the time being continue to exercise the same jurisdiction as heretofore, and any judge or justice, being a member of any such court, holding office at the time when this constitu-tion comes into operation, shall for the time being continue to be a member thereof and hold office by the like tenure and upon the like terms as heretofore, unless, in the case of a judge of the said Supreme court or of a County court, he signifies to the representative of the crown his desire to resign. Any vacancies in any of the said courts so continued may be filled by appointment made in like manner as appointments to judgeships in the courts established under this constitu-tion: Provided, That the provisions of Art. 66 as to the decision of the Supreme court established under this constitution shall apply to decisions of the Court of Appeal continued by this article.

Art. 76. If any judge of the said Supreme ourt of Judicature or of any of the said County courts on the establishment of courts under this constitution is not with his consent appointed to be a judge of any such court, he shall for the purpose of Art. 10 he shall, for the purpose of Art. 10 scheduled treaty, be treated as if he had retired in consequence of the change of government effected in pursuance of the said treaty, but the rights so conferred shall be without prejudice to any rights or claims that he may have against the British government.

77. Every existing officer of the provisional government at the date of the ing into operation of this constitution being an officer whose services have been lent by the British government to the provisional government) shall on that date be transferred to and become an officer of the Irish Free State (Saorstat Eireann), and shall held effect by a transferred to any government of the Irish Free State (Saorstat Eireann), and shall hold office by a tenure corresponding to his previous tenure.

Art. 78. Every such existing officer who Art, 78. Every such existing officer who was transferred from the British government by virtue of any transfer of services to the provisional government shall be entitled to the benefit of Art. 10 of the scheduled treaty. Art. 79. The transfer of the administration of any public service, the administration of which was not before the date of the coming into operation of this conciliation transferred.

into operation of this constitution transferred to the provisional government, shall be deterred until the 31st day of March, 1923, or such earlier date as may, after one month's previous notice in the Official Gazette, be fixed by the executive council; and such of the officers engaged in the administration of those services at the date of transfer as may be determined in the manner hereinafter appearing shall be transferred to and become officers of the Irish Free State; and Art. 77 of this constitution shall apply as if such officers were existing officers of the provisional government who had been transferred to that government from the British government. The officers to be so transferred in respect of any services shall be determined in like manner as if the administra-tion of the services had before the coming into operation of the constitution been transferred to the provisional government.

Art. 80. As respects departmental property, assets, rights and liabilities, the government of the Irish Free State (Saorstat Eveann) shall be regarded as the successors of the provisional government, and to the extent to which functions of any department of the British government become functions of the government of the Irish Free State (Saorstat Eireann), as the successors of such department of the British government.

After the date on which this constitution comes into operation the house of parliament elected in pursuance of the Irish Free State (Agreement) act, 1922 (being the constitution), may, for a period not exceeding one year from that date, but subject to compliance by the members thereof with the provisions of Art. 17 of this constitution, exercise all the powers and authorities conferred ercise all the powers and authorities conferred on the chamber (dail circann) by this constitution, and the first election for the chamber (dail eireann) under Articles 26, 27 and 28 hereof shall take place as soon as possible after the expiration of such period.

Art. 82. Notwithstanding anything contained in Articles 14 and 33 hereof, the first senate (seanad eireann) shall be constituted immediately after the coming into operation of this constitution in the manner following, that is to say:

(a) The first senate (seanad) shall consist of sixty members, of whom thirty shall be elected and thirty shall be nominated.
(b) The thirty nominated members of the senate (seanad) shall be moninated by the senate (seanad) shall be nominated by the president of the executive council, who shall, in making such nominations, have special regard to the providing of representation for groups or parties not then adequately represented in the chamber (dail).

The thirty elected members of the (c) senate (seanad) shall be elected by the chamber (dail eireann) voting on principles of pro-ber (dail eireann, voing portional representation. (d) Of the thirty nominated members, fifteen, to be selected by lot, shall hold office for the full period of twelve years: the remaining fifteen shall hold office for the period of six years.

(e) Of the thirty elected members, the first lifteen elected shall hold office for the period of nine years; the remaining fifteen shall hold office for the period of three years.

(f) At the termination of the period of office of any such members, members shall be elected in their place in manner provided by Art. 32.

(g) Casual vacancies shall be filled in manner provided by Art. 34.

Art. 83. The passing and adoption of this constitution by the constituent assembly and the British parliament shall be announced as soon as may be, and not later than the 6th day of December. 1922, by proclamation of his majesty, and this constitution shall come into operation on the issue of such proclamation. tion

(Second Schedule.)

IRISH FREE STATE TREATY.

Article 1. Ireland shall have the same constitutional status in the community of nations known as the British emvire as the Dominion of Canada, the Commonwealth of Australia, the Dominion of New Zealand and the Union of South Africa, with a parliament having powers to make laws for peace and order and good government in Ireland and an executive responsible to that parliament, and shall be styled and known as the Irish Free State.

Art. 2. Subject to provisions hereinafter set out, the position of the Irish Free State in relation to the imperial parliament, the government and otherwise shall be that of the Dominion of Canada, and the law, practice and constitutional usage governing the relationship of the crown or representative of the crown and the imperial parliament to the Dominion of Canada shall govern their relationship to the Irish Free State ship to the Irish Free State.

Art. 3. A representative of the crown in Ireland shall be appointed in like manner as the governor-general of Canada and in accordance with the practice observed in making such appointments.

Art. 4. The oath to be taken by the members of the parliament of the Irish Free State shall be in the following form:
"I do solemnly swear true faith and allegiance to the constitution of the Irish Free State as by law established, and that I will be faithful to his majesty King George V.

be faithful to his majesty King George V. and his heirs and successors by law, in virtue of the common citizenship of Ireland with Great Britain and her adherence to and membership of the group of nations forming the British commonwealth of nations."

Art. 5. The Irish Free State shall assume liability for service of the public debt of the united kingdom as existing at the date thereof and toward the payment of war pensions existing on that date in such proportions as may be fair and equitable, having regard for any just claims on the part of Ireland by way of setoff or counterclaim, the amount of such sums being determined, in default of agreement, by the arbitration of one or more independent persons being citizens of the British empire.

independent persons being citizens of the British empire.

Art. 6. Until an arrangement has been made between the British and Irish governments whereby the Irish Free State undertakes her own coast defense, defense by sea of Great Britain and Ireland shall be undertaken by his majesty's imperial forces, but this shall not prevent the construction of maintenance by the government of the Irish Free State of such vessels as are necessary for the protection of the revenue or the fisheries. The foregoing provisions of this article shall be reviewed at a conference of representatives of the British and Irish governments to be held at the expiration of five years from the date hereof with a view to the undertaking by Ireland of a share in her own coastal defense.

Art. 7. The government of the Irish Free State shall afford to his majesty's imperial force (a) in time of peace such harbor and other facilities as are indicated in the annex hereto, or such other facilities as may from time to time be agreed between the British government and the government of the Irish Free State, and (b) in time of war or of strained relations with a foreign power such harbor and other facilities as the British government may require for the purpose of such defense as aforesaid.

Art. 8. With a view to securing observance.

Art. 8. With a view to securing observance of the principle of international limitation of armaments, if the government of the Irish Free State establishes and maintains a military Free State estationsnes and maintains a military defense force, the establishment thereof shall not exceed in size such proportion of the military establishments maintained in Great Britain as that which the population of Ireland bears to the population of Great Britain

Art. 9. The ports of Great Britain.

Art. 9. The ports of Great Britain and the Irish Free State shall be freely open to the ships of other countries on the payment of the customary port and other dues.

Art. 10. The government of the Irish Free State agrees to pay foir compression Free

Art. 10. The government of the Irish Free State agrees to pay fair compensation, on terms not less favorable than those accorded by the act of 1920, to judges, officials, rrembers of police forces and other public servants who are discharged by it or who retire in consequence of the change of government effected in pursuance of the hereof paragraph: Provided, That this agreement shall not apply to members of the auxiliary police force or persons recruited in Great Britain for the royal Irish constabulary during the two years, next preceding the date hereof. The British government will assuare responsibility for such compensation or persions as may be payable government win assume responsionity for such compensation or pensions as may be payable to any of these excepted persons.

Art. 11. Until the expiration of one month from the passing of the act of parlament for the ratification of this instrument the powers of the paylament and convenient the powers of the parliament and government of the Irish Free State shall not be exercisable as respects northern Ireland, and the provisions of the govnorthern Ireland, and the provisions of the government of Ireland act of 1920 shall so far as they relate to northern Ireland remain of full force and effect and no election shall be held for the return of members to scrve in the parliament of the Irish Free State for the constituencies of northern Ireland unless a resolution is passed by both houses of parliament of northern Ireland in favor of holding such elections before the end of said month.

Art. 12. If before the expiration of said Art. 12. If before the expiration of said month an address is presented to his majesty by both houses of parliament of northern Ireland to that effect, the powers of the parliament and government of the Irish Free State shall no longer extend to northern Ireland. and the provisions of the government of Ireland act of 1920 (including those relating to the council of Ireland) shall, so far as they relate to northern Ireland continue to be to the council of Ireland) shall, so far as they relate to northern Ireland, continue to be of full force and effect, and this instrument shall have effect, subject to the necessary modi-fications: Provided, That if such an address is so presented a commission consisting of three so presented a commission consisting of three persons, one to be appointed by the government of the Irish Free State, one to be appointed by the government of northern Ireland and one, who shall be chairman, to be appointed by the British government, shall determine in accordance with the wishes of the inhabitants, so far as may be compatible with economic and geographic conditions, the boundaries between northern Ireland and the rest of Ireland, and for the purposes of the government of Ireland act of 1920, and of this instrument, the boundary of northern Ireland shall be such as may be determined by such commission. commission.

Art. 13. For the purpose of the last foregoing article the powers of the parliament of southern Ireland, under the government of Ireland act of 1920, to elect members of the council of Ireland, shall, after the parliament of the Irish Free State is constituted, be exercised by that parliament.

Art. 14. After the expiration of said month, if no such address as mentioned in article 12 is presented, the parliament of the government.

is presented, the parliament of the government of northern Ireland shall continue to exercise as respects northern Ireland the powers conferred upon them by the government of Ireland at of 1920, but the parliament of the government of the Irish Free State shall in northern Ireland have in relation to matters, in respect of which the parliament of northern in respect of which the parliament of northern Ireland has not the power to make laws under that act (including matters which, under said act, are within the jurisdiction of the council of Ireland), the same powers as in the rest of Ireland, subject to such other provisions as may be agreed to in the manner hereinafter appearing.

Art. 15. At any time after the date hereof the government of northern Ireland and the provisional government of southern Ireland, hereinafter constituted, may meet for the pur-provisional government of southern Ireland, hereinafter constituted, may meet for the purpose of discussing provisions, subject to which he last of the foregoing article is to operate in the event of no such address as is therein mentioned being presented, and those provisions may include (a) safeguards with regard to patronage in northern Ireland; (b) safeguards with regard to the collection of revenue in northern Ireland; (c) safeguards with regard to import and export duties affecting the industry of northern Ireland; (d) safeguards for the minorities in northern Ireland; guards for the minorities in northern Ireland; (e) settlement of financial relations between northern Ireland and the Irish Free State; (f) northern Ireland and the Irish Free State; (f) powers of the local militia in northern Ireland and the relation of the defense forces of the Irish Free State and of northern Ireland, respectively, and if by any such meeting provisions are agreed to the same shall have effect as if they were included among the provisions subject to which the powers of parliament and of the government of the Irish Free State are to be exercisable in northern Ireland Ireland.

Art. 16. Neither the parliament of the Irish Free State nor the parliament of northern Art. 10. Nether the parliament of the frish free State nor the parliament of northern Ireland shall make any law so as either directly or indirectly to endow any religion or prohibit or restrict the free exercise thereof, or give any preference or impost any disability on the account of religious belief or religious status, or affect prejudicially the right of any child to extend exacting public mounts. child to attend school receiving public money without attending the religious instruction of the school or make any discrimination as respects state aid between schools under the management of the different religious denominations, or divert from any religious denomination or any educational institution any of

By way of provisional arrangement for the administration of southern Ireland during the interval which must elabse between the date hereof and the constitution of a national area of a government of the between the date hereof and the constitution of a parliament and a government of the Irish Free State in accordance therewith, steps shall be taken for symmoning a meeting of the members of parliament elected for constituencies in southern Ireland since the passing of the government of Ireland act in 1920 and for constituting a provisional government. And the British government shall take steps necessary to transfer to such provisional government the powers and machinery requisite for the discharge of its duties, providing that every member of such provisional government shall have signified in writing his or her acceptance of the instrument. But this arrangement shall not continue in force beyond the expiration of twelve months from the date hereof.

Art. 18. This instrument shall be submitted forthwith by his majesty's government for the approval of parliament and by the Irish meeting summoned for the signatories to a meeting summoned for the purpose of members elected to sit in the house of commons of southern Ireland, and if ap-proved it shall be ratified by the necessary legislation.

HOME FOR REGULAR ARMY SOLDIERS.
The United States maintains a home for disabled and discharged soldiers of the regular army at Washington, D. C. The governor is Maj.-Gen. Tasker H. Bliss (retired).

STATE SOLDIERS' HOMES. There are a number of state homes for disabled volunteer soldiers who, for various reasons, are unable to obtain admission to the national homes. The federal government contributes toward the support of the state homes the sum of $100 for each soldier, based upon the average attendance for the year; the remainder of the expenses is paid by the states themselves. year; the remainder of the by the states themselves.

CONFEDERATE SOLDIERS' HOMES.

Confederate veterans of the civil war have a home at Beauvoir, near Biloxi, Miss. The residence there of Jefferson Davis in his last years was secured in 1902 as a refuge for helpless old southern so'ders by the United Sons of Confederate Veterans. It is supported by that society and the United Daughters of the Confederacy.

INFORMATION FOR RADIO USERS.

[By W. S. Hedges.]

The year 1922 will be recorded in the archives of time as a radio year. Scientists had known the secrets of radio-telephony for several years, but to the average citizen it was a closed chapter. However, in the space of little more than a year more than 1,000,000 radio outfits had been installed, according to official estimates of the United States bureau of standards. Radio-telephony, in the opinion of experts, would to-day probably be languishing in much the same manner that radio-telegraphy languished had it not been for the establish-ment of a radio broadcasting service by the ment of a radio broadcasting service by the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company at Pitteburgh, Pa., and at Newark, N. J. As though a match had been set to tinder, the nation was swept with a wave of enthusiasm that will constitute one of the wonders of the year. People in every station in life wanted to build or buy a radio receiving device so that they might pick up the masic that filled the ether. In the summer of 1921 there were about 50,000 radio receiving sets and in December, 1922, there are more than 1,000,000, representing at least a twenty-fold increase.

In order to satisfy the desires of the enthusiasts newspapers throughout the nation estab-lished radio departments and printed numerous articles containing explanations of the theory and practice of radio. advice on building sets. and practice of radio, advice on building sets, answered questions and told of the many news events transpiring in the radio world and of concern to the radio public. The Chicago Daily News was the only newspaper in the middle west to print a special Radio Magazine Section for the huge and ever-increasing family of fans, though other papers conducted radio columns.

Fast as the fans increased the broadcasters were even faster. In 1922 nearly 600 broadcasting stations had been licensed to send out programs, which included every variety of audible entertainment. Speeches, vocal music, instrumental selections, orchestral, band and choir music, as well as grand opera, were broadcast by these stations. Market reports, stock quotations and weather forecasts were also put into the air by the broadcasters. also put into the air by the broadcasters.

The broadcasting was done on three wave lengths. General radio work was broadcast on 360 meters wave length, while wenther reports were sent out on 485 meters, the wave length used by many stations that confine their iength used by many stations that colline their broadcasts to commercial matter. In August the department of commerce authorized a new wave length of 400 meters to be used by stations whose equipment and character of programs met a prescribed standard. Each broadcasting station has a signal call.

composed of three or four letters. Three letters were assigned the United States to begin all broadcasting calls at a conference of wireless interests of various nations which met in Switzerland several years ago. These letters or W. W. and N. The government reserves for Switzerland several years ago. These letters are K, W and N. The government reserves for itself the letter N to begin the call of its stations, Thus we have NSF, the navy station at Anacostia, District of Columbia. The government also employs several of the W groups for the army and the K groups for the postoffice department. The letters were assigned in alphabetical order except in special cases. Thus we have WMAQ, the call letters of the station from which The Dally News radio service broadcasts its programs.

During the year ineffectual attempts have been made to remedy legislative measures buring the year interectian attempts have been made to remedy legislative measures which were not considered adequate to the new situation, but owing to a disagreement among the radio interests the proposed measures made little headway in congress. The proposals endeavor to fulfill a need for systematic control of the air, but the clash of interests has prevented even a compromise.

DICTIONARY OF RADIO TERMS.

Aerial—A system of wires insulated from and suspended at advantageous heights from the ground, generally being connected through suitable apparatus to earth. Used to radiate energy in form of ether waves from oscillations flowing along it and to receive energy in form of oscillations from ether waves crossing: it. When used for reception the correct name is antenna. Both terms are used for either receiving or radiating.

deed for either receiving or radiating.

Aerial Circuit—Consists of aerial and earth, including all coils and condensers which may be between these and forming a direct path to earth and a rial.

Aerial Tuning Condenser—Variable condenser in capital from the condenser in the condenser in the condense of the condenser in the condense of the condense aerial circuit. Used to vary oscillation con-

Alternator—Dynamo arranged to produce alternating currents by employing collecting slip rings instead of commutator:

Alternating Current—One having its direction of flow constantly changed and incidentally its magnitude. That is, one which periodically changes its direction of flow.

Ammeter—Instrument for measuring in amperes in a circuit, is connected in series with circuit. Exists in a variety of forms, the most common of which depends upon the fact that the force a magnet exerts depends upon the number of ampere turns. Therefore, the greater the number of amperes sent through its coils the greater will be the attraction of a balanced armature.

mpere—Unit of current. Is that current impere—Unit of current. Is that current which when passed through a certain solution of silver nitrate and water deposits .001118 gram of silver per second. Flow of one coulomb per second. One ampere flow through one ohm when an E. M. F. of one volt is applied through one ohm when an E. M. F. of one volt is applied.

Ampere Hour-Commercial unit of quantity. Is that quantity which flows in one hour through circuit carrying a current of one ampere. Is equal to 3.690 coulombs. Amplifer-Device used to increase the volume of intensity of a received impulse or signal. See magnetic amplifier, microphonic amplifier, vacuum tube amplifier.

Actual Antenna-Aerial when used for receiver.

Antenna—Aerial when used for receiver. Actually a feeler. See aerial.

Aperiodic-Untuned.

Apparatus—A group of instruments necessary for the carrying out of any experiment or for the carrying on of any process.

for the carrying on of any process.

Arc—When two carbon rods in contact and having an electric current passing through them are separated a conducting arc of carbon vapor is formed between them, producing an intense white light.

Arc Lamp—A mechanism for automatically "striking" an arc, i e., bringing the two carbons together and then automatically separating them to the correct distance. Mechanism provided to "feed" the carbons as they are burned away. The negative carbon is pointed, while the positive has a hollow crater tip. In England are lamps are usually connected in parallel series, but in America the series connection is used.

Au.—Aurum, or gold.
Audibility Meter—An instrument used to measure approximately the comparative strength of incoming signals.

Bank Winding-An improved and modern form of winding inductance, one layer on top of another, in such a manner that a distributive capacity is reduced to a minimum.

Battery—A collection of voltaic cells or storage cells, or of leyden jars, joined up in series.

In fact, any collection of units multiplied and

Beat Reception—The method of detecting received oscillations, usually undamped, by causing them to interact with other locally produced sustained oscillation of slightly different frequency and generally of later amplitude. The beat or resultant note is the difference between the frequencies of the two independent oscillations. The method is one of extreme sensitiveness and selectivity. May also be employed, though not so effectively, for reception of damp wave trains, and in which case a hissing sound is only reproduced in the telephones by incoming signals. Also known as interference and heterodyne reception.

Bolometer-Type of Wheatstone bridge having an easily heated resistance, such as a very fine wire in one arm. A barretter may be used.

An American expression signifying small dynamo used in conjunction with main dynamo temporarily to raise, when neces-sary, to its normal pressure. It is generally sary, to its normal pressure. It is generally driven by a motor supplied with energy from the main generator and thus becomes a continuous current transformer. Frequently used for charging accumulators of a generating plant.

Bradfield Insulator-A particular kind of leading-in insulator, consisting of an ebonite tube provided with zinc cone and etonite spark disks for breaking up continuous streams of rain running down outside which might cause serious earthing of aerial. The whole is held in position, half way through roof of operating room, by means of a stuff-ing box. The aerial is led in by means of a steel rod running through the center of the tube

B. S. G .- British standard gauge of wire. Buckling of Plates—During the discharge of a secondary cell the plates gradually expand, owing to the fact that lead sulphate has about twice the volume of the same quantity of lead peroxide. Should this expansion or discharge take place too quickly the plates

will bend or buckle.

Bushing—A piece of composition or fiber used for the purpose of separating electrical circuits in any given piece of apparatus.

Buzzer—Same as electric bell, but with hammer and gong removed. Used for testing receiver gear by means of a small local circuit. Make-and-break contact is made to serve as small spark gap, the small spark thus formed setting up oscillations which are plainly recorded by the detector; sometimes shuntid across and exciting the closed circuit shunt d across and exciting the closed circuit.

B. W. G.—Birmingham wire gauge.
Capacity—Power of containing. A condenser has unit capacity (farad) when a charge of one coulomb creates a difference of potential

one coulomb creates a difference of potential of one volt between its terminals. This farad being too large for practical purposes, the microfarad is used. Carborundum—A potential crystal rectifier. An artificial silicate of carbon (SiC) produced in an electrical furnace. Has various tints from deep gray to violet purple. Is next in hardness to diamond. Silver gray kind is most sensitive for detector uses.

naruness to diamond. Silver gray kind is most sensitive for detector use. Cartridge Fuse—One in which the fuse wire is surrounded by some noninflammable substance inclosed in a cartridgelike cardboard tube and having brass slugs to caps at ends. Used to prevent a hot wire from "flying"

when fused.

Cat Whisker—So called on account of its appearance. Usually a fine spring wire resting lightly on any mineral or crystal or a detector

Choke Cells—Cells wound to have great self-induction. Usually wound over an iron core, which is generally composed of a bundle of wires, "tails" or laminated sheets insulated from each other to prevent eddy currents. The choke effect is called impedance. See also air core, choke and inductive coil.

Cipher—Commercially, groups of five letters, or groups having the secret meaning. Com-pare code. Some government ciphers have more than five letters per group.

Circuit Closed Oscillating—The path in which the electric flows is called a circuit. It may consist partly of a metallic conductor and partly of the die-electric of a condenser. If this condenser has its plates very near together so that the lines of electrostatic force are mostly contained between the two plates the circuit is called a closed oscillating circuit.

Circuit Open or Radiating—A circuit compris-ing in part a metallic conductor and in part a condenser the plates or faces of which are very far apart, so that the lines of electrostatic force extending from one plate to the other stretch far out into the surround-

Clark Cell-Formerly the standard cell, but now replaced by the Weston cell. Container in a glass tube. At the bottom is mercury, the H. P. element, then a paste of mercurous sulphate and saturated zinc sulphate, above which is a quantity of saturated zinc sulphate. A zinc rod is held in position with its base in the zinc sulphate paste but not in contact with the mercury. A platinum wire, insulated by a small glass tube, makes contact with the mercury and forms positive pole E. M. P. 1.43 volts at 15 degrees centigrade. grees centigrade. Cleats—Porcelain wall fasteners for wires, con-

Cleats—Porcelain wall lasteners to sisting of a base having two grooves. Clips—Small mechanical spring devices to the strain and a covering piece. The receive the wires and a covering piece. The whole being held in place by a single screw through the middle. Used to make a con-through the middle. Osed to make a contact for connection with any circuit.

Closed Coupling—Exists where primary and secondary of jigger or oscillating transformer are very close together when inductively coupled; or if direct coupled, when a large proportion of the turns are comment. proportion of the turns are common. Causes much mutual inductiveness.

ommutator—A two-way switch used for changing the direction of a current in a cir-cuit. On a dynamo or motor, refers to the number of copper strips fixed on a cylinder Commutator—A of insulator and parallel to the axis of armature shaft, to which are affixed the ends of armature windings. Produces a direct current from the alternating current which dyrent from the alternating current which us-namos naturally generate.

Compass, Radio—A name given to a form of radio telegraphic direction finder by which the bearing of a transmitting station can be ascertained by the receiving station.
Condenser—Two or more sheets of metal separated by an insulator called a dielectric, which forms a collector of electrical enwhich forms a collector of electrical ergy; BIII condenser, leyden jar; variable condenser, disk condenser.

Conductance—Property of a body for conducting electricity. Unit of ohm which is the Conductance—Fronce...

Ing electricity. Unit of ohm which is reciprocal of the ohm.
Conductor—A material through which electricity flows freely. All metals are so Waves-C. Continuous w. ontinuous Waves—C. W. A. wave train whose amplitudes are constant. One having no damping. In practice it is produced by an arc discharge in place of spark, also by oscillating valve. H. F. alternator, or re-flection alternator (Goldschmidt). also by frequency-multiplying transformers as in frequency-multiplying transformers as in Telefunken, and also by the Marconi "timed spark" discharges. Core Type—Transformer having a majority of its core inside both coils.

Coupling Waves—The two waves produced when oscillating circuits are coupled.

Coupling—A measure of the mutual induct-ance between two oscillatory circuits. The connecting of two oscillatory circuits. The Crystals—Bornite, carborundum, copper pyrites, galena, graphic tellurium, iron pyrites, negyagite—pericon, radiocite, silicon, sylvan-ite, tellurium and zincite.

Crystal Detector—One depending upon fact that certain combinations of metallic crystals and metals permit a current to pass more readily in one direction than the other, thus having a rectifying effect upon the train of oscillation, converting it to an intermittent direct current which may be added to work a sensitive talenhone. Crystals termittent direct current which may be made to work a sensitive telephone. Crystals may be cleaned with carbon disulphide. Current—Rate of flow of electricity, the unit of which is the ampere.

Damping—The dying down of amplitude in train of waves, due to radiation from and resistance of an oscillating circuit.

Detector—Any apparatus which converts the oscillations which are received by the aerial into visible or audible signs. (See coherer crystal electricities are the converted electrophytic magnetic yacuum tube.) into visible or audible signs. (See coherer, crystal, electrolytic, magnetic, vacuum tube.) Direct Coupling—A coupling in which the inductance coils of both circuits are metallically or directly connected.

Direction Finder—Two Bellin aerials at right angles, each of which has in the middle of the lower side a coil which acts inductively upon another coil in detector circuit and which is capable of being swung until parallel with either aerial coil. The loudest signals are heard when swinging detector coil is par-llel to coil of aerial whose plane is in direction of oncoming wayes. In practice of the control of th is in direction of oncoming waves. In practice calibration is arranged to give readings so that weakest signals indicate direction. since zero position is much more sharply defined than maximum. Also known as radio compass. Directive Aerial—A bent aerial gives greater radiation in plane of aerial, but in opposite direction to which open or free end points. If an inclosed aerial, radiation is equal in both directions of the plane and zero is at right angles to the plane. Direct Loose Coupling—One in which the two inductance colls though metallically connected are at a distance from each other, or in which only a few turns are common to both circuits.

Direct Tight Couplings—Exist where one cuit has its inductance formed by taking off a number of turns from the coil actually employed as inductance in the other circuit.

Or when radio between common turns is large. Also called direct close coupling. Disk Condenser—A variable condenser having its two sets of plates composed of semicircular interleafing metal vanes, separated by insulating disks or air, the whole being mounted in a circular case. One set of vanes is fixed, while the other mounted on an insulating spindle, is capable of being turned to an angle of 180 degrees, thereby permitting of any desired amount of interleating of vanes, and thus any required amount of capacity. of capacity.

Dry Cell-Consists of a zinc retainer having a lining of plaster of paris and flour, moistened with a saturated solution of sal ammoniac, with a saturated solution of sai ammoniac, in the center of which is a carbon rod surrounded by manganese dioxide and crushed carbon. The whole is sealed with pitch, with two small vent holes left for the gases to escape. It is fitted with the necessary termines and an outer cardboard sheath.

Polarizes rather rapidly. Electric Field-Surrounding an electrified body in which its influence can be noticed. Electric strain in an electric medium caused by an electrified body.

Electric Induction-Electric strain in dielectric

Electric Induction—Electric strain in dielectric medium. (See induction) Production of electrical effects at a distance. Electricity—From Greek word "elektron." meaning amber. One of the earliest known methods of producing electric charges was by rubbing amber with silk. The word was first used by Dr. Gilbert of Colchester, England, in the year 1600.

Electrodes—Specially constructed terminals for passing an electric current through any desired substance. (See electroylsis.)

Electrodynamics—Science of electricity in motion. Current electricity. Electrokinetics.

Electrolysis-The decomposing of a compound into its component elements by passing an electric current through it. Electrodes, points at which the current enters (then a node) and leaves (cathode or kathode) the compound to be decomposed (electrolyte). Element given off at the anode is the anion: that given off at the cathode is the cation or kation. In case of water oxygen is the anion and hydrogen is the cation. into its component elements by passing an electric current through it. Electrodes.

Electrolytic Detector-Consists of a fine platelectrolytic Detector—Consists of a fine plat-inum wire just touching an electrolyte con-tained in a small platinum cup. Electrolyte may be either 10 per cent solution of sul-phuric acid. dilute alkaline solution, or a 20 per cent solution of nitric acid. Current from a local battery, which is connected to cup and point, keeps point covered with small bubbles owing to the electrolysis. Passing oscillations break through these bubbles destraving their insulating propersmall bubbles owing to the electrolysis. Passing oscillations break through these bubbles destroying their insulating properties and permit a momentary current from local battery to flow through phones. Electromagnet—A rod of iron, usually soft, rendered temporar ly magnetic by a current passing through the insulated wire colled around it. The current does not actually enter the iron, merely flows around it. Electron—Ultimate or final atom of negative electricity. An atom plus electron is a nogative ion. Electrons also called negative ative ion. Electrons also called negative corpuscles.

Element-A pure simple substance which is indivisible into other component substances by any known method. Compare compounds. There are about eighty known elements. Each element has a symbol, which is usually the first or first two letters of its Latin name, e. g., au stands for aurum, which is Latin for gold. Most metallic elements in the Latin end in um.

. M. F.—Electromotive force. Unit is the volt, which is that electric pressure necessary to force a current of one ampere through the conductor having a resistance of one ohm.

P. S.—Accumulator having pasted plates after the Faure for principal but built up on after the raure for principal out that a perial of grid, ther—Name given to an imponderable medium presumed to permeate all matter and space. The standard or ultimate dielectric medium through the action of which all electric and proportion of the preferred. Ethermagnetic phenomena are to be referred.

Excite—To electrify or to magnetize, as, for instance, a dynamo's field magnet. External Circuit—The whole of a circuit, including the instruments, outside the generator erator. Farad—Unit of capacity. Conductor, as capacity of one farad when a charge of one coulomb raises its potential by one volt. This being too big for practical purposes, the microfarad is usually employed. See microfarad capacity. farad.

Flat Top Aerial—Aerial whose upper portion is parallel to earth. See T aerial and inverted

L aerial. Forced Oscillations-Oscillations having different frequencies to natural frequency of a circuit in which they are set up. Freak-A sudden peculiar change in the working range of radio station without any alterations being made with regard to power or arrangement of instrument. Bange may in-crease or decrease, while being strong at much more distant one. Usually occur at night and early morning, mainly in fine weather and between 20 and 40 degrees both sides of the equator.

Free Oscillations-Oscillations having the same frequency as the natural frequency of the circuit in which they are set up.

Frequency—Number of waves of complete os-cillation per scond. Periodicity. Frequencies Audo—Frequencies corresponding to normally audible vibrations below 10,000 cycles per second.

Frequencies, Radio - Frequencies higher than those corresponding to the normally audible vibrations and usually about 10,000 cycles Fundamental Wave Length — Natural wave length of an aerial or circuit.

Fuse-A short length of conducting material having a low melting point, usually lead wire, inserted in a circuit in such a manner that should a current rise above a safe amount the fuse melts, thus breaking the circuit and preventing damage to instrualena — A natural crystal sulphide of lead (PbS.S.G.7.5); also called lead glance. Has a blue-gray color similar to freshly cut lead. Galena - A When heated in air becomes lead sulphate (PbSO4). The cubical crystal is a nonpotential rectifier. Is a thermo-electric detector. In use as such it has an adjustable graphite point or fine metal wire resting on its sur-

Galvanometer-An instrument used for detecting the presence of and ascertaining the force and direction of current in a circuit. Consists of a small iron needle pivoted in the center of a hollow coil of wire, moving a pointer on a graduated scale. See mirror galvanometer and tangent galvanometer.

Glass Plate Condenser—One formed of thin zinc sheets separated by glass plates, the whole being immersed in oil.

Grid-The frame of wire gauze placed between and insulated from the plate and filament of a vacuum tube.

Grid Leak-A nonconductive resistance between Grid Leak—A nonconductive resistance between the grid and filament of three-element vacu-um tube and designed to permit excess grid charges to leak off to an external source. Ground—Earth connection. Ground—Clamp—A metal device fastened to a gas or water pipe so as to secure an effective ground connection. Harmonics-Incidental waves differing in length and frequency to the true and original wave of a transmitter. They are most noticeable in undamped wave operation. In an earth aerial the first harmonic is three times that of the natural frequency, or one-third wave length of aerial; second is five times the natural frequency, or one-fifth wave length, while the third is seven times and one-seventh respectively.

Henry-Unit of inductance. Is that inductance in a circuit when amperage per second is changing at a rate of one ampere per second and producing indifference of potential in that circuit of one volt. Hertzian Waves—Ether waves, named after the discoverer.

High Frequency-Frequencies over a few thousand per second. Highly Damp Train—One having very few oscillations, owing to the rapidly dying away.

High-Frequency Resistance — Conductors offer more resistance to high-frequency currents than to low-frequency currents owing to the fact that since they, the H. F. C., use only the surface, a smaller amount of material is offered for the passage of the currents than in the case of L. F. C., which soak in and utilize the whole of the conductor. It is also called skin effect.

ydrometer — Instrument for measuring the specific gravity (density) of a liquid by flotation. Used for testing state of charge and Hydrometer — Instrument discharge of storage cells.

Impedance-The resistance which a coil of wire offers to a current due to back T. M. F. apart from that offered by the ohmage. It is due to reactance.

Impedance Coil-A coil of wire wound over a soft iron core.

Inductance—Electrical inertia. Inductance Coil—A coil of wire so arranged as to have a large amount of inductance. called choking coil, impedance, reactance, retardation coil.

Inductance-The transfer of an electric or magnetic state from an electrified or magnetized body to a nonelectrified or nonmagnetized body by proximity without contact. Induction Coil (or Rhumkorf Coil)—An instrument which increases the voltage of a direct current at the expense of a corresponding loss of amprage by induction Coming loss of amperage by induction. Comprises an iron core having a few windings of comparatively thick wire over which is wound a secondary winding of much thinner wire and of many more turns. Usually an automatic make and break, of the hammer type, is in series with the source of supply to the primary winding. Two ends of secto the primary winding. Two ends of sec-ondary winding are attached to suitable dischargers.

Inductive Close Coupling—One in which the in-ductances of the two circuits are very close to each other but without actual metallic contact.

Inductive Coupling — Two oscillatory circuits coupled by bringing the inductance coil of one into the field of force produced by that of the other.

Inertia—That property of matter which tends to preserve a state of rest or to resist a change of motion.

Interference—In the case of wave motion two sets of waves which proceed from one and the same source or from duplicate sources may arrive at a distant point in such a manner that the motions or changes which constitute these waves annul one another at that point. The waves are then said to interfere. Inverted "L" everted "L" Aerial—One whose down leads are tapped off from one end of its horizontal span. See length of aerials.

Ion—An atom of matter carrying an electron or an atom deprived of electrons. Monad-ion unit charge; dyad-ion, divalent, carries two units, while triad-ion carries three unit units, while triad-ion carries three unit charges. Positive ion is an atom minus an electron and a negative ion is an atom plus an electron.

Jamming — Expression denoting interference from another station. QRM. Jigger—Term generally accepted to denote an oscillation transformer. Used for transforming trains or oscillations from one circuit to another. Dr. J. Erskine Murry refers to the high frequency oscillations as "jigs."

Joule's Law—Heat produced in a current is directly proportional to square of the current to resistance at the time.

Key—The transmitting key is a switch by which the primary circuit may be readily and rapidly broken.

Kilowatt—One thousand watts, K. W. Knife Switch—One in which the movable arm wedges in between two parallel spring clips.
Length of Aerial—An aerial is measured from many of its extremities to point of connection with instrument, the measure of one component wire alone being taken into consideration. In a "T" aerial only half the horizontal span must be added to the length of the down leads. In inverted "L" aerial total beginning to the constant of the const horizontal span must be added to down leads. In umbrella type length of aerial is taken as length of one radial lead added to down lead, Magnetic Detector-Consists of a soft iron band lagnetic Detector—Consists of a soft from band slowly rotating through a small transformer placed beneath two permanent magnets having their like poles adjacent. Primary windings of transformer are connected to earth and aerial, while the telephones are connected to earth and aerial, while the telephones are connected. and aerial, while the telephones are connected across the secondary. Iron band passing beneath the magnets is in a series of constantly changing fields, thereby producing a strain on the magnetic lines of force. As an oscillation this strain breaks down, causing a sudden change in the magnetization of the iron band, which takes place within the secondary winding and causes on within the secondary winding and causes an induced current to flow through it and thus operate the telephones.

Magnetic Poles—The points on a magnet where attraction is strongest. Of the earth, north magnetic is situated in latitude 70 degrees north and longitude 97 degrees west. The south pole is at latitude 70 degrees south and longitude 102 degrees east. Notit that the magnetic poles do not coincide with the geographic poles.

Megomite-A substance very similar to micanite. Mho-Unit of conductivity. Is the reciprocal of the resistance. Microfarad (Mfd.)—Practical unit of capacity—millionth part of a farad.

Microhm—One millionth of an ohm.

A sound magnifier. Varying the pressure imposed by sound waves causes a diaphragm to equally vary its normal pressure to unsuitable conductors, this in turn equally varying the electrical resistance of the points of contact, thus permitting a current whose strength varies as the imposed sound waves to pass into a telephone.

Molecule-The smallest group of atoms of an element or a compound which can exist by themselves. Kelvin stated that if a drop of water could be magnified to the size of the earth its component molecule would be the size of cricket balls.

Morse—Samuel F. B. Morse, an American, was the first to devise a method of sending interest of the control in the control of the con the first to devise a method of sending in-telligible signals by means of electrical im-pulses by varying duration along a wire. This system is the well-known Morse code. There are two generally used forms of this code—the American and the universal or coutinental Morse code. The latter is now universally used except in certain countries where special codes have been formed to meet the requirements of local language, such as Japan, Turkey, etc.
Multiple Tuner — Consists of three adjustable circuits, by means of which a large variety of tunes can be obtained.

Negative Pole—One by which current is said to return to source after having passed through circuit.

Noninductive Coil-Is formed by doubling the wire and winding from the loop at one end. Noninductive Circuit—A circuit which possesses very small or negligible inductance. Such an inductance can be made by doubling a single length of wire and winding it on a bobbin, so that a current flowing through it makes as many turns one way as the other and there is little or no self-length magnetic field.

Ohm—Unit of resistance. Resistance offered by a coulomb of mercury at temperature of melting ice, 14,452 grams in mass of constant cross section, and having length of 106.3 cms. Circuit has resistance of one ohm when one volt is required to force a current of one ampere through it. Voltage divided by amperage gives ohms.

Ohms Law-Current in amperes is equal to pressure in volts divided by resistance in ohms.

Oscillating Current—Alternating current having a frequency of hundreds of thousands or even millions per second

Oscillation Transformer-See jigger

Oscillations—Alternating currents of very high frequency are called electrical oscillations. If the amplitude is constant they are called sustained or persistent or undamped oscilla-tions, but if the amplitude dies away they are called damped oscillations. If the oscil-lations take place with the natural frequency of the circuit and without any external imor the circuit and without any external im-pressed electromotive force they are called free oscillations, but if they take place under the action of an external E. M. F., the fre-quency of which is not in accord with the natural frequency of the circuit, they are called forced oscillations.
Oscillator—A device for producing oscillations.

Oscillatory Circuit—A circuit ductance and capacity thr oscillating current will flow. circuit possessing inthrough which an

Parallel-When two or more paths are open to a current they are said to be in parallel. Also known as shunts,

Patent-A privilege granted by any recognized government on payment of certain fee where-by a person is permitted the monopoly of manufacture and sale of a certain invention for a term of years.

Plugs-Round brass rods fitted with wooden or obnite handles having a hole down center to receive flex wire, which is attached to a rod by screws. Used in connection with plug sockets, fitted on various instruments where quick changes of connections are rerod by screws. quired.

Polarized Relay - One in which a magnetized Polarized Relay — One in which a magnesized swinging arm is placed between poles of two electromagnets. When current passes one pole must change so that arm is now attracted by one and repelled by the other. Much more sensitive to weak currents than the ordinary relay.

Potential Rectifier—A crystal or form of rectifier which requires initial current to peec

tifier which requires initial current to pass through it to become sensitive.

Potentiometer—A device for tapping off any desired fraction of an existing potential drop and for applying it to the points required. It is quite distinct from an ordinary variable resistance.

Quenched Spark-A form of spark which, owing to the arrangement of the discharger, extinguishes itself after allowing a few oscillations to pass, thus permitting a secondary or aerial circuit to oscillate with its own natural frequency without interacting with the primary. Quenched Spark Transmitter—A radio telegraphic transmitter employing a quenched spark.

Radiation—The transmission of energy through space in the form of electromagnetic waves. If these waves are very short—namely, a small fraction of an inch—the radiation is called heat or light; if the waves are much longer, the wave length being measured in feet or miles, it is called electromagnetic radiation.

Radio Compass (also named direction finder. goniometer)—A radio receiving device making use of a loop antenna capable of revolving its plane in any given direction so as to secure maximum signals response and thereby locate the direction of a transmitter. In American practice, however, the minimum signal response is used instead of the maximum, as the latter is not sharp enough for accurate work. Also several radio-compass stations are employed simultaneously at va-rious points of the coast, enabling the plotting and accurate securing of a ship's posi-tion. Also employed by other leading mari-time nations on a similar plan of action, though not always the same radio system of direction finding. The Bellini-Tosi method is probably the nioner system in Function is probably the pioneer system in Europe.

Radio Telegraph—One which depends upon the radiation of electrical energy in form of ether waves. Popular terms are wireless telegraph and radio.

Radio Telephony-Transmission of speech by means of electromagnetic ether waves.

Reaction Circuit—A circuit comprising a vacuum tube amplifier so arranged that part of the magnified energy in the plate circuit is led back to, or caused to react upon the grid circuit, thus increasing the energy received by the grid and greatly magnifying the response to weak signals. The coupling the response to weak signals. The coupling the response the grid circuit and plate circuit. between the grid circuit and plate circuit may be magnetic or electric. Also known as regenerative Armstrong or Franklin circuit and ultramagnifier or ultra-audion.

Regenerative Circuit (often called the Armstrong circuit)—See reaction circuit.

Relay—An instrument containing a sensitive magnet which, upon receiving a weak current from one circuit, closes another circuit nest from one circuit, closes about of higher power.

Resistance (radiation)—This is the ratio of the total energy radiated (per second) by the antenna to the square of the R. M. S. current at a potential node (generally the ground connection).

Resistance, Radio Frequency—This is the ratio of the heat produced per second in watts to the square of the R. M. S. current (r.f.) in amperes in a conductor.

Sounder-Telegraph receiving instrument. Consists of a brass armature pivoted on end over two electromagnets. Is connected up similar to a single-stroke bell. When a cur-When a cursummar to a single-stroke bell. When a current passes the magnets attract the armature, causing it to click against a metallic rest. Upon the circuit being broken, the key being released, a spring jerks the armature back into place, giving a click as it strikes another rest. Dots and dashes are recognized by the time interval between these two clicks. recognized by t these two clicks.

Spark Gap-A break in an oscillating circuit which acts as an automatic safety valve to the condenser. The air in the gap having a high resistance the condenser cannot dis-

a high resistance the condenser cannot discharge until the potential is sufficient to break down its insulation, thus permitting only heavy discharges to take place. Spreader—A spar or pole used for keeping the component wires of an aerial parallel to each other. A double-lug steel band is fitted to each end to facilitate attachment to aerial and bridle by shackles. Stand-By-Position of the tuner whereby waves of widely varying length are received. In operating the expression is used to mean "Wait and listen" or "Don't interrupt." The international signal is QRX.

Static—Atmospheric disturbance. Static Induction—Effect inducting a temporary electric charge in an electrified body by bringing near to it but without contact an electrified body. Transference without contact

Step-Down Transformer—One which has many more turns of wire in the primary than in the secondary, thereby increasing amperage and voltage.

Step-Up Transformer—One in which secondary has many more turns of wire than the primary, thereby increasing voltage at the expense of amperage.

Storage Battery—A number of secondary cells capable of being charged or discharged at the same time through the same circuit. A quantity of cells used as one. Also known as accumulators.

Storage Cell—Secondary cell or accumulator.
One which stores up electrical energy in form of chemical energy. See secondary

W. G.-A British standard wire gauge. Switch-Apparatus for readily connecting and disconnecting two wires.

Aerial—One having its own down leads tapped from the middle of the horizontal span.

elefunken—German system of radio teleg-raphy. Translated into English is "spark telegraphy," or, more literally, "far or dis-tant spark." Distinctive features are its quenched spark and electrolytic detector. Telefunken-

Telegraph—Any apparatus for transmitting in-telligence from one point to another at a distance. Literally, "writing at a distance." Generally used in conjunction with the Morse code.

Telephone—An instrument having a disk of soft iron, diaphragm, held over and near to soft from diaphragm, need over and near to an electromagnet whose windings are such that very weak electric currents, whether direct or indirect impulse, will cause disk to be attracted, attraction and retrac-tion of this diaphragm producing audible sound waves. Speaking at a distance, liter-and mica, variable by a plug, which is used for putting telephones in most sensitive condition.

Telegraphy, Radio-The art of sending and receiving radiograms.

Telephony, Radio-The art of sending and re-elephony, hado—ine art of sending and re-ceiving radiophones.

esla Coil—An oscillation transformer for producing high potential discharges from oscillations of low potential. Somewhat similar to an ordinary transformer, though much more heavily insulated, and has ends of secondary connected to a condenser which discharges carges a great gan this increasdischarges across a spark gap, thus increasing rapidity of oscillations, which then pass into a second induction coil. The second coil has no iron core.

Transformer—An instrument similar in action and construction to an induction coil, inasmuch as there are two separate coils, one having few turns and the other many turns, placed close together to permit of induction and having a common laminated core. Being used for alternating currents, it does not require an automatic make and break like the induction coil, as the alternations produce sufficient alternations in the magnet field to induce a current into the secondary winding.

Velocity of Electric Waves-186,000 miles per second. Velocity of Ether-186,000 miles per second, velocity of Ether—180,000 miles per second, or the same as light and electric waves. Velocity of Light—186,000 miles per second. Volt—V.—That electric pressire which steadily applied to a resistance of one ohm produces a current of one ampere. Voltaic Cell—Named after volts.

Volt Box-Potentiometer.
Voltmeter-Instrument for measuring voltage of circuit. Connected across mains.

Voltmeter—nico of circuit. Connected across of circuit. Connected across of possible very constant of electric power. One joule persecond. To find power multiply voltage by second. To find power multiply voltage by amperage. Kilowatt equals 1.000 watts; 746 watts equal one electric horse power.

Watt Hour—Commercial unit of electric work is work done in one hour by current of one ampere flowing between two points of a conductor having a difference of potential of one volt.

Wave Length—Distance between two successive antinodes in same direction.

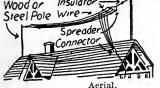

Wave Motion—An up-and-down movement of the particles of a fluid substance, the motion being transferred from each particle to then next in a horizontal direction but with little or no permanent lateral displacement. Wave Length, Natural—In a loaded antenna (that is, with series inductance of capacity) the natural wave length corresponds to the lowest free oscillation.

Weston Cell—The present standard cell. Consists of mercury with a paste of mercurous and cadmium sulphides which form the cathode and has an anode of 12.5 per cent cadmium amalgam in an electrolyte of saturated solution of cadmium sulphate. Has a rated solution of cadmium sulphate. Has a constant E. M. F. of 1.125 volts at 20 de-Has a constant E. M. F. of 1.125 voits at 20 degrees centigrade.

Wheatstone Bridge—Instrument for determining resistance of a body by balancing it with another of known resistance.
Wireless Telegraphy—Popular expression used to denote a telegraph employing ether waves as a method of transference of intelligence, instead of using a flow of current along a wire

FIRST WOMAN UNITED STATES SENATOR.

Mrs. W. H. Felton, 87 years of age, served twenty-two hours and twenty-five minutes as United States senator from Georgia on Nov. 21.22, 1922, having been appointed to the po-eition by Gov. Thomas W. Hardwick on Oct. 3. At the election on Nov. 7 Walter F. George was elected senator at the polls. but he de-layed his appearance at the special session of congress one day, permitting Mrs. Felton to be sworn in on Nov. 21 and to serve until the following day, when he took his seat. She was the first woman to become a member of the United States senate. Mrs. Felton made the United States senate. Mrs. Felton made one brief address before Mr. George was sworn in. .

GEORGES CLEMENCEAU IN THE UNITED STATES.

Georges Clemenceau, the veteran French statesman and one of the outstanding figures of the world war, arrived in New York, N. Y. Nov. 18, 1922, on a brief visit to the United States to explain unofficially France's postwar policy. He spoke at the Metropolitan Opera house in New York on Nov. 21, at the Tremont temple in Boston, Nov. 24, at the Auditorium in Chicago on Nov. 28, and at a number of other places. M. Clemenceau laid especial emphasis upon the necessity of coperation between the United States, Great Britain and France and upon the necessity of military preparedness in France.

GERMAN REPARATIONS AND INTERALLIED DEBTS.

MORATORIUM FOR GERMANY.

On page 391 of this volume will be found an article describing in detail the efforts by European statesmen to restore the old world to a condition of normalcy. The proceedings of the conferences at Cannes, Genoa and The Hague, at which it was sought without success to settle the German reparations, Russian and the questions, are cited. It may be added that later in the year (Aug. 31) the reparations commission agreed on a plan which temporarily at least deferred the threatened bankruptcy of Germany. This plan was as follows:

The reparations commission, after examining the new request for a moratorium, dated July 12, 1922, and taking into account the fact that the German state has lost its the fact that the German state has lost its credit, both internal and external, and that the mark has depreciated continuously down to 3-1.000ths of its normal value, decides:

"First—To defer its decision on the request of the German government until the commission has completed its scheme for the radical reform of German public finances, including '

(a) Balancing of the budget: (b) in the event of the governments represented on the reparations commission giving their prior con-sent thereto, reduction of Germany's foreign obligations in so far as may be considered necessary for the restoration of her credit; (c) currency reform; (d) the issue of foreign and internal loads in order to consolidate the financial situation.

inancial situation. "Secondly—With a view to giving time for reparations and the carrying out of the measures referred to under paragraph 1 above, the commission agrees to accept in payment of the cash installments falling duang. 15 and Sept. 15 and unless in the meantime other arrangements are made, of the further cash installments falling due between Oct. 15 and Dec. 31, 1922, German government six months' treasury bills payable in gold and guaranteed in such manner as may be agreed upon between the German government and the government of Belgium (to which power the payments have been assigned) or in default of such agreement, by the deposit of gold in a foreign bank approved by Belgium."

This plan was followed, but in the early

This plan was followed, but in the early part of December the financial situation was not improved and France was pressing her claims with vigor., threatening to act independently and seize the Ruhr region if the payment of indemnities was not resumed at the end of the moratorium. Another conference on this explicit ference on this subject was scheduled to take place in Brussels in December.

FALL IN VALUE OF GERMAN MARK The inability of Germany to pay the in-demnities demanded by the allies and the continued issue of paper money had a disastrous tinued issue of paper money had a disastrous effect on the German monetary unit, the mark. On Nov. 3, 1922, it had fallen as low as 6,156 for $1. The par value of a gold mark is 23.8 cents. The accompanying diagram, reproduced from the Federal Reserve Bulletin, shows the decline in value of the German mark from January, 1921, to October, 1922. As already indicated, this value declined still further in October and Navember November.

UNITED STATES WITHDRAWS. UNITED STATES WITHDRAWS,
The United States formally withdrew from the reparations commission in Paris, France, on Feb. 19, 1921, when Roland W. Boyden of Beverly, Mass., presented the following statement to the commission in Paris, France:
"I am instructed by my government to announce the retirement of its unofficial representatives from the reparations commission. This decision has been reached only after long hesitation and careful consideration. All representation upon the commission was, in the beginning, unofficial in anticipation of ratification of the treaty of Versailles by the signatory powers.

"The other powers have ratified and their representation has long become official. The United States has not ratified, and, as time has passed, its unofficial representation on the commission gradually has become anomalous.

commission gradually has become anomalous.
"My government, under the foregoing condition, has felt itself unable to co-operate with the allied powers at Brussels and elsewhere in the preparation of plans which seem to involve a change in the treaty. It realizes fully the great difficulty of these problems and recognizes the value of unified cotions, even as it cannot at present take next. action; even as it cannot at present take part in such a discussion or even express any views upon the subject discussed, it feels that it is undesirable to retain even unofficial representation on the commission that is likely to be charged with the execution of "My government instructs me further to express its sincere appreciation for the many courtesies which the commission and its members have shown the United States and its unofficial representatives."

In addition to Mr. Boyden some twenty Americans serving on subcommissions with-drew in accordance with the notice. Mr drew in accordance with the notice. Boyden, however, continued to act as

U. S. AND COSTS OF OCCUPATION.
On March 10, 1922, at a meeting in Paris, France, of the allied finance ministers engaged in dividing up German payments to the reparations commission, Roland W.
Boyden, the unofficial observer of the United States with the commission on reparations, presented the following memogradium.

States with the commission on reparations, presented the following memorandum:
"I have received this morning (March 10) a cable from Washington instructing me to inform you that the costs of the American armies of occupation up to May 1, 1921, amount to approximately $241,000,000. The allied governments, with the possible exception of Great Britain, have received the whole of their costs of occupation up to that date and apparently the expenditure for the British army will be met by the present arrangement. and apparently the expenditure for the Brillsh army will be met by the present arrangement. Taking these facts into consideration the government of the United States counts on obtaining the total payments of the costs of its army of occupation with interest due to May 1, 1921, before any part of the German payments shall be distributed for reparations or for any other purpose.

"With respect to current costs I have received instructions to declare that the government of the United States will demand their payment, but that if it receives assurance of payment it does not foreses difficulties in arranging practical delays within which payments may be made"

The demand contained in the memorandum

The demand contained in the memorandum was virtually ignored by the allied finance ministers, who proceeded with their work of dividing up the payments made by Germany in accordance with, a plan adonted at Considerable discussion followed, Cannes. Considerable discussion followed, some of the allies—France in particular—taking the view that because the United States had not ratified the treaty of Versailles, but had made a separate treaty with German payments with the allies. On behalf of the United States it was asserted that the allied refusal to set aside a part of the German payments for the expenses of the American armies of occupation was based on a mere technicality and was inequitable.

AMERICAN POSITION EXPLAINED. Cannes. AMERICAN POSITION EXPLAINED.

The position taken by the United States was made clear by the following identic note, dated March 22, 1922, and addressed to the governments of Belgium Great Britain, governments of Belgiu France, Italy and Japan:

"The government of the United States has believed, and still believes, that the governments of the allied powers have no disposition to question the right of the United tion to question the right of the United States to be paid upon an equal footing with them, the actual cost of its army of occupa-tion which it has maintained in Germany since the joint armistice agreement of Nov. 11, 15. While 1918. attitude of the government of the United States in expecting full payment of these costs has been repeatedly set forth it is deemed to be appropriate, in view of it is deemed to be appropriate, in view of recent developments, to make this statement its position.

"The amount of the claim of the United States for its army costs is understood to be well known and to be free from any substantial dispute. According to the information and accounts in the procession of the stantial dispute. According to the information and accounts in the possession of the allied governments. It appears that the total cost of all the armies of occupation from Nov. 11, 1918. to Mav 1, 1921, amounted to 3,639,282,000 gold marks: that the amounts due to Belgium. France and Italy for their army costs for that period have been paid in full (chiefly through deliveries of property) and that the unpaid balance of army costs due May 1, 1921, amounted to 1,660,090,000 gold marks due to the United States and the British Empire as follows: United States .......966 374.000 gold marks cunation made its report dealing with the army costs since May 1, 1921. This included calculations with respect to the American army, and its actual costs since that date were included in the proposed provision for payment pari passu with the other nowers. "It had been supposed that this report to the supreme council would be referred to the conference of ambassadors and would pave the way for suitable action with respect to the American army costs both current and accumulated. It was with surprise that the government of the United States recently learned that negotiations in connection with and following the meeting at Cannes in January last apparently contemplated the substitution for the recommendation of the army costs commission of other arrangements which would ignore American army costs altogether, although estimates both for army costs and reparations were being made on the basis of the entire capacity of the German govern-

the entire capacity of the German government to pay.

"When it came to the notice of this government that it was proposed at the meeting of the finance ministers, to convene at Paris on March 8, definitely to assign the greater portion of the amount heretofore paid in cash by Germany, and not yet finally allocated, to the payment of army costs without making any provision for those of the American army, it was deemed advisable again to direct attention to the position of the United States. The government of the United States has been advised that all the arrangements of the finance ministers have been made subject to the rights of the United States and that these ministers have also suggested that the government of the United States should take up the question directly with the governtake up the question directly with the governments concerned.

"It is not believed that the meaning of this agreement can be regarded as doubtful. It had not only its express provision but its necessary implications. It is the view of this government, and it is confidently believed that it is the view of all the governments concerned, that this agreement on the part of the allied and associated revernments with Germany and with each other had the with Germany and with each other had the clear import that the powers associated in this joint enterprise should stand upon an equal footing as to the payment of all the actual costs of their armies of occupation. and that none of the powers could, consistently with the agreement, make any arrangement for a preferential or exclusive right of payment.

"Further, it is assumed that it would not for a moment be contended that any of the allied powers would have been entitled to enter into any arrangement by which all the assets or revenues of the German empire and its constituent states would be taken for their benefit to the exclusion of any of the other powers concerned.

"It was apparently in recognition of the existing and continuing obligation as to army costs that, in the treaty of Versailles, in undertaking to place a first charge upon all the assets and revenues of the German empire and its constituent states (article 248), priority was given to the total cost of al. priority was given to the total cost of all armies of the allied and associated govern-ments in occupied German territory from the date of the signature of the armistice agreement.

"Articles 249 and 251 of the treaty of Versailles provide:

"Art. 249. There shall be paid by the German government the total cost of all armies of the allied and associated governments in occupied German territory from the date of the signature of the armistice of Nov. 11, 1918, including the keep of men and beasts. lodging and billeting, pay and allowances, salaries and wages, bedding, heating, lighting, clothing, equipment, harness and saddlery, armament and rolling stock, air services, treatment of sick and wounded, veterinary and remount services, transport service of all sorts (such as by rail, sea or river, motor lorries), communications and correspondence, and in general the cost of all administrative or technical services the working of which is necessary for the training of troops and for keeping their numbers up to strength and preserving their military efficiency.

Art. 251. The priority of the charges exact ablished by article 248 shall, subject to the qualifications made below, be as follows:

(a) The cost of the armies of occupation as defined under article 249 during the armistice and its extensions;

"(b) The cost of any armies of occupation as defined under article 249 after the coming into force of the present treaty;
"By the treaty between the United States and Germany, signed Aug. 25, 1921, the ratifications of which were exchanged on Nov. 11, 1921, it is provided that the United States shall have and enjoy the rights and advanged on the property of the control of the co shall have and enjoy the rights and advan-tages stipulated for the benefit of the United States in the treaty of Versailles, notwith-standing the fact that the treaty has not been ratified by the United States.

"The government of the United States entertains the view, and submits it to the consideration of the allied governments, that the Costa of its army of occupation pari passu with the allied governments, and that payments received by them from Germany in the exclusion of the United States without its consent consent.

"The government of the United States is unable to conclude that the justice of its claim is not fully recognized. The governments of the allied powers will not be unmindful of the fact that the government of the United States has repeatedly and earnestly been solicited not to withdraw its army of occupation and this army has been continued upon the basis of the right to be paid its actual cost upon an equal footing with the allies.

"But, while it is believed that the allied governments cannot fail to appreciate the manifest equity of the claim of the United States, it is understood that it has been suggested that there are technical difficulties which stand in the way of its recognition. While willing to take into full consideration every possible question, this government is unable to find any such technical obstacle.

"It is assumed that if any technical question were raised it would be based upon the fact that the United States has not ratified the treaty of Versailles. It may be pointed out however, that Germany has explicitly consented to the priority of payment of the cost of the American army of occupation nothwithstanding the fact that the treaty of Versailles has not been ratified by the United States.

TROOPS ORDERED HOME

Before the foregoing note was made public President Harding had directed that all the American troops in occupied Germany should be returned to the United States by July 1. The announcement came in the form of an official statement issued by Secretary of War Weeks on March 20. This was as follows: official statement issued by Secretary of War Weeks on March 20. This was as follows: "Some months ago the president directed that the troops in Europe, at least in excess of 2,000 officers and men, should be returned to the United States by the regular transport service which was then and is now in operation. He has now directed that this service be continued until all of the troops have been brought to the United States which would mean that before the end of the fiscal year the entire force will have been returned. Additional transports will not be operated to complete this movement."

Some American troops, however were still in the Rhineland in December, 1922.

BALFOUR NOTE ON WAR DEERIS

BALFOUR NOTE ON WAR DEBTS.

On Aug. 1, 1922, the earl of Balfour sent the following note on war debts to the French ambassador in London and also to the diplo-matic representatives of Italy, the Serbo-Croat-Slovene State. Roumania, Portugal and Greece:

"Your Excellency: As your excellency is aware, the general question of the French debt to this country has not as yet been the subject of any formal communication between the two governments, nor are his majesty's government anxious to raise it at the present moment. Recent events, however, leave them little choice in the matter, and they feel com-pelled to lay before the French government their views on certain aspects of the situation created by the present condition of international indebtedness.

tional indebtedness. "Speaking in general terms, the war debts, exclusive of interest, due to Great Britain at the present moment amount in the aggregate to about £3.400.000,000, of which Germany owes £1,450,000.000, Russia £550,000,000 and our allies £1.300,000.000. On the other hand. Great Britain owes the United States about a quarter of this sum—say, £850,000,000 at par of exchange, together with interest accrued since 1919.

the repayment of capital. But if action in the matter has hitherto been deemed inopportune this is not because his majesty's government either underrate the evils of the present state of affairs or because they are reluctant to of analys or because they are reluctant to make large sacrifices to bring it to an end. On the contrary, they are prepared, if such a policy formed part of a satisfactory international settlement, to remit all the debts due to Great Britain by our allies in respect of loans or by Germany in respect of reparations.

"Recent events, however, make such a policy difficult of accomplishment. With the most perfect courtesy and in the exercise of their undoubted rights the American government have required this country to pay the interest accrued since 1919 on the Anglo-American debt, to convert it from an unfunded to a funded debt and to repay it by a sinking fund in twenty-five years. Such a procedure is clearly in accordance with the original contract. His majesty's government make no complaint of it; they recognize their obligations and are prepared to fulfill them. But evidently they cannot do so without profoundly modifying the course which in differ-"Recent events, however, make such a policy foundly modifying the course which in different circumstances they would have wished to pursue. They cannot treat the repayment of the Anglo-American loan as if it were an iso-lated incident in which only the United States of America and Great Britain had any concern. It is but one of a connected series of transactions in which this country appears sometimes as debtor, sometimes as creditor, and if our undoubted obligations as a debtor are to be enforced our not less undoubted rights as a creditor cannot be left wholly in abeyance.

"His majesty's government do not conceal the fact that they adopt this change of policy with the greatest reluctance. It is true that Great Britain is owed more than it owes and that if all interallied war debts were paid the British an interained war depts were paid the British treasury would, on balance, be a large gainer by the transaction. But can the present world situation be looked at only from this narrow financial standpoint? It is true that many of financial standpoint? It is true that many the allied and associated powers are, as between each other, creditors or debtors, or both, and are much more. They But they were, and are, much more. They were partners in the greatest international effort ever made in the cause of freedom, and they are still partners in dealing with some, at least, of its results. Their debts were incurred, their loans were made, not for the separate advantages of particular states, but for a great purpose common to them all, and that purpose has been in the main accomplished.

"To generous minds it can never be agreeable, although for reasons of state it may perhaps be necessary, to regard the monetary aspect of this great event as a thing apart, to be torn from its historical setting and treated as no more than an ordinary commercial dealing between traders who borrow and capitalists who lend. There are, moreover, reasons of a different order to which I have already referred, which increase the distaste with which his majesty's government adopt so fundamental an alteration in method of dealing with loans to allies. The economic ills from which the world is suffering are due to many causes, moral and material, which are quite outside the scope of this dispatch. But among them must certainly be reckoned the weight of in-ternational indebtedness, with all its unhappy effects upon credit and exchange, upon national production and international trade. The peoples of all countries long for a speedy return to the normal. But how can the normal be reached while conditions so abnormal are permitted to prevail? And how can these conditions be cured by any remedies that seem at "For evidently the policy hitherto pursued by this country of refusing to make demands upon its debtors is only tolerable so long as it is generally accepted. It cannot be right that one partner in the common enterprise should recover all that she has lent and that another, while recovering nothing, should be required to pay all that she has borrowed. Such a procedure is contrary to every principle of natural until of natural justice and cannot be expected to commend itself to the people of this country. They are suffering from an unparalleled burden of taxation, from an immense diminution in national wealth, from serious want of employment and from the severe curtailment of phoyment and from the severe curanment of useful expenditure. These evils are courage-ously borne. But were they to be increased by an arrangement which, however legitimate, is obviously one-sided, the British taxpayer would inevitably ask why he should be singled out to bear a burden which others are bound to share. "To such "To such a question there can be but one answer, and I am convinced that allied opinion will admit its justice. But while his majesty's government are thus regretfully constrained to request the French government to make arrangements for dealing to the rest of their ability with Anglo-French loans they desire to explain that the amount of interest and repayment for which they ask depends not so much on what France and other allies owe to Great Britain as on what Great Britain has to pay America. The policy favored by his majesty's government is, as I have already observed, that of surrendering their share of German reparation and writing off, through one great transaction, the whole body of interallied indebtedness. But if this be found impossible of accomplishment we wish it to be understood that we do not in our property of the control of the con not in any event desire to make a profit out of any less satisfactory arrangement. In no circumstances do we propose to ask more from our debtors than is necessary to pay to our our depoters than is necessary to pay to our creditors. And, while we do not ask for more, all will admit that we can hardly be content with less. For it should not be forgotten, though it sometimes is, that our liabilities were incurred for others, not for ourselves. The food, the raw material, the munitions required by the immense naval and military efforts of Court. quired by the immense naval and military efforts of Great Britain and half the £2,000,-000.000 advanced to allies were provided not by means of foreign loans but by internal borrowing and war taxation. Unfortunately, a similar policy was beyond the power of other European nations. Appeal was therefore made to the government of the United States: and under the arrangement then arrived at the United States insisted, in substance if not in form, that, though our allies were to spend the money, it was only on our security that they were prepared to lend it. This co-operative effort was of infinite value to the common cause, but it cannot be said that the role assigned in it to this country was one of special privilege or advantage.

"Before concluding I may be permitted to offer one further observation in order to make still clearer the spirit in which his majesty's government desire to deal with the thorny problem of international indebtedness.

"In an earlier passage of this dispatch I pointed out that this, after all, is not a question merely between allies. Ex-enemy countries also are involved, for the greatest of all international debtors is Germany. Now his majesty's government do not suggest that, either as a matter of justice or expediency. Germany should be relieved of her obligation to the other allied states. They speak only for Great Britain, and they content themselves with saying once again, so deeply are they con-vinced of the economic injury inflicted on the world by the existing state of things, that this country would be prepared (subject to the just claims of other parts of the empire) to abandon all further right to German reparation and all claims to repayment by allies, provided that this renunciation formed part of a general plan by which this great problem could be dealt with as a whole and find a satisfactory solution. A general settlement would, in their view, be of more value to mankind than any gains that could accrue even from the most successful enforcement of legal obligations.

"I have, etc., HADDEGLAY CHARTER

WRONG IMPRESSION CREATED.

The foregoing note created the impression among many in Great Britain that the Amer-ican government was playing an unjustifiable and ungenerous part in the matter of settling the debts incurred by the allies in the great war. Much irritation was also caused in France, where it was recognized that the note would imperil the success of the reparations conference arranged to begin in London on Aug. 7: in fact, it had that effect, as the meeting adjourned without anything decisive have ing adjourned without anything decisive having been accomplished.

In the United States and also in some quarters in Great Britain it was felt that the note. ters in Great Britain it was felt that the note, though courteous in tone, was a serious diplomatic blunder in that it was likely to endanger the friendship existing between the two countries. It was pointed out that Lord Balfour was in error in assuming that the United States had "insisted, in substance if not in form, that, though our allies were to spend the money [borrowed from the United States], it was only on our security that they [the United States] were prepared to lend it."

SECRETARY MELLON'S STATEMENT.

The fact that Lord Balfour had been misinformed in this matter was brought out clearly by the secretary of the treasury in Washing-ton, Andrew W. Mellon, in a formal statement issued Aug. 24. The text of this statement follows: A number of inquiries have been received, as a result of statements recently published, with respect to the exact status of the obligations of foreign governments held by the United States. Especial attention has been directed to States. Especial attention has been directed to the origin of the indebtedness of the British government, amounting to about $4,135,000.000. It has been said that this liability was not incurred for the British government but for the other allies, and that the United States, in making the original arrangements, had insisted in substance that, though the other allies were to use the money borrowed, it was only on British security that the United States was prepared to lend it. It is apparent from the inquiries which have reached the treasury department that it is supposed that this, in substance, is the explanation of the existing in stance, is the explanation of the existing indebtedness of Great Britain.

"It should be said that the obligations of foreign governments in question had their origin almost entirely in purchases made in the United States, and the advances by the United States government were for the purpose of covering purposes by of covering payments for these purchases by the allies.

"The statement that the United States gov-ernment virtually insisted upon a guaranty by growing out of the war, now held by the the British government of amounts advanced United States."

to the other allies is evidently based upon a to the other allies is evidently pased upon a misapprehension. Instead of insisting upon a guaranty, or any transaction of that nature, the United States government took the position that it would make advances to each government and would not require any government to give obligations for advances made to cover the nurchases of any other government. Thus the purchases of any other government. Thus the advances to the British government, evi-denced by its obligations, were made to cover its own purchases, and advances were made to the other allies to cover their purchases.

"The nature of the arrangements is shown by a memorandum which the secretary of the treasury, in June, 1918, handed to the British ambassador, as follows:

"So far as the purchases of the allied governments for war purposes within the United States and its territories and insular posses sions are concerned it is the expectation of the secretary of the treasury to continue as here-tofore the advances necessary to enable the financing of such purchases. The secretary quite agrees with what he understands to be the views of the chancellor of the exchaquer that advances shall be made to each allied government for the commodities purchased in the United States by it and that no allied gov-ernment should be required to give its obliga-tions for such purchases when merely serving as a conduit for the supply of the materials so purchased to another allied government. Any other course would indeed be incompatible with what the secretary of the treasury deems a cardinal principle, which should be followed in respect to such advances, namely, that the allied government for the use of which the commodity is purchased must give its own obligation therefor and the obligation of any other allied government cannot be accepted by the United States as an equivalent. "It is well to further quote from a memorandum handed to the British ambassador in June, 1920, by the secretary of the treasury recording these leaves of the treasury

regarding these loans as follows:

"'It has been at all times the view of the United States treasury that questions regarding the indebtedness of the government of the united kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland to the United States government and the funding of such indebtedness had no relation either to questions arising concerning the war loans of the United States and of the united kingdom to other governments or to questions regarding the reparation payments of the central empires of Europe. These views were expressed to the representatives of the British treasury constantly during the profid when the treasury constantly during the period when the United States government was making loans to the government of the united kingdom and since that time in Washington, in Paris and in London.

"From these two statements it appears to be used clear that the respective borrowing nations each gave their own obligations for the money advanced by the United States and that no guaranty of the obligations of one borrowing nation was asked from any other nation. This is the understanding of the treasure of the treasure of the foreign obligations.

Art. 5. Each government shall pay its own expenses, including compensation of its own commissioner, agent or counsel. All other expenses, including honorarium of the umpire, shall be borne by the two governments.

Art. 6. The two governments may designate agents and counsel who may present oral cr written arguments to the commission.

The decisions of the commission and those of the umpire (in case there may be any) shall be accepted as final and binding upon the two governments. the two governments.

Art. 7. The present agreement shall come into force on the date of its signature.

War Claims Commission.

Germany requested that the umpire should be an American and accordingly President Harding appointed Associate Justice William R. Day of the United States Supreme court to act in that capacity. Justice Day resigned his position to devote his whole time to the work of adjusting the war claims. Germany appointed Dr. Klesselbach, a Hamburg attorney, as her commissioner, while the United States selected Robert C. Morris of New York city, a lawyer, to act in a similar capacity for the American government. War Claims Commission.

STATUS OF REPARATIONS PAYMENTS. The allied supreme council at a conference held in Paris, France, Jan. 24-29, 1921, fixed the reparations Germany was to pay as foi-the reparations terminally was to purelished.

"For the purpose of satisfying the obligations imposed upon her by articles 231 and 232 of the treaty of Versailles, Germany shall, irrespective of the restitution she is to make under article 238 and of any other obligation under the treaty, pay:

"I. Fixed annuities payable half yearly in equal parts as follows: (a) Two annuities of 2000 000 000 000 marks from May 1, 1921, qual parts as follows: (a) Two annuities of 2,000.000.000.000 gold marks from May 1, 1923, to May 1, 1923, (b) three annuities of 3,000.000.000 gold marks from May 1, 1923, to May 1, 1926, (c) three annuities of 4,000.000.000.000 gold marks from May 1, 1926, (b) May 1, 1926, (d) three annuities of 5,000.000.000.000 gold marks from May 1, 1929, to May 1, 1932; (e) thirty-one annuities of 5,000.000.000.000 gold marks from May 1, 1932, to May 1, 1932; (e) thirty-one annuities to 6,000.000.000 gold marks from May 1, 1932, to May 1, 1963. [The total of the fixed annuities was thus 296 000.000.000 gold marks or approximately $53,788,000.000.]

"2. Forty-one annuities running from May 1, 1921, equal in amount to 12 per cent all valorem of German exports, payable in gold two months after the close of each half year 'On April 27, 1921, the allied reparations commission in Paris issued the following official communique:

official communique:

official communique:
"The reparations commission, in pursuance of stipulations of article 233 of the treaty of Versailles, has decided unanimously to fix at 132.000 000,000 gold marks the amount of damages for which reparations is due by Ger many in terms of article 232, second paragraph, and of annex 1 of part 8 of said treaty.

"In fixing this amount the reparations commission had effected the necessary deductions from the amount of damages in order to make allowance for restitutions effected or to make anowance for restitutions effected or to be effected in execution of article 238, and in consequence no credit will be allowed to Germany in respect to such restitutions.

"The commission has not included in the above amount the sum in respect to further obligations incumbent on Germany in virtue of the third paragraph of article 232 to make reimbursement of all cursa which Pair make reimbursement of all sums which Beigium has borrowed from allied and associated governments up to Nov. 11. 1918, together with interest at the rate of 5 per cent on such sums.'

The 132.000,000,000 gold marks (normal value $31,416.000,000) mentioned in the communique referred to the principal only and not to the total sum of principal and interest for forty-two years. This was placed by the allies earlier in the year at 225,000.000,000 gold marks, or $55,188.000,000.

000.000 gold marks, or $55.188.000,000. The allied supreme council met in London on April 30, with Prime Minister Lloyd George, Premier Briand, Count Sforza of Italy, Baron Hayashi of Japan and M. Jasper of Belgium and other delegates present. M. Briand's views prevailed and the plans for the occupation of the Ruhr region and the terms for reparations payments were approved. The council, however, decided to grant Germany a few days grace and not to enforce the penalties on May 1 as had been proposed. After long consideration by members of the council and study by experts the following ultimatum was adopted and on May 5 seant to Germany.

5 sent to Germany:
"The allied powers, taking note of the fact "The allied powers, taking note of the fact that, in spite of the successive concessions made by the allies since the signature of the treaty of Versailles, and in spite of the warnings and sanctions agreed upon at Spa and at Paris, as well as of the sanctions amounced in London and since applied, the German government is still in default in the fulfillment of the obligations incumbent upon it under the terms of the treaty of Versailles as regards (1) disarmament; (2) the payment due on May 1, 1921, under article 235 of the treaty, which the reparations commission has already called upon it to make at this date; (3) the trial of the war criminals as further provided for by the allied notes of Feb. 13 and May 7, 1920; and (4) certain other important respects, notably those which arise under articles 264 to 267, 269, 273, 321. 322 and 327 of the treaty, decide:

"(a) To proceed forthwith with such preminiary measures as may be required for the occupation of the Ruhr valley by the liminary measures as may be required for the occupation of the Ruhr valley by the allied forces on the Rhine in the contin-gency provided for in paragraph (d) of th.s

note:

"(b) In accordance with article 233 of the treaty to invite the reparations commission to prescribe to the German government without prescribe to the German government without delay the time and manner for securing and discharging the entire obligation incumbent upon that government, and to announce their decision on this point to the German government at latest on May 6:

"(c) To call upon the German government categorically to declare within a period of six days from the receipt of the above decision its resolve (1) to carry out without reserve or condition their obligations as defined by the reparations commission; (2) to accept without reserve or condition the guaranties in respect of those obligations prescribed by the reparations commission; (3) to carry out without reserve or delay the measures of military, naval, and aerial disarmament notified to the German government by the allied powers in their note of Jan. 29, 1921, those overdue being completed at once, and the remainder by the prescribed dates; (4) to carry out without reserve or delay the trial of the war criminals and the other unfulfilled portions of the treaty referred to in the paragraph of this note:

"(d) Failing fulfillment by the German covernment of the above conditions by May 12, to proceed to the occupation of the valley of the Ruhr and to take all other military and naval measures that may be required. Such occupation will continue so long as Germany fails to comply with the conditions summarized in paragraph (c)."

The ultimatum was accompanied by a schedule prescribing the time and manner for securing and discharging the entire obligation of Germany for reparation under articles 231, 232 and 233 of the treaty of Versailles. It follows in part:

"The reparations commission has, in accordance with article 233 of the treaty of Versailles, fixed the time and manner for securing and discharging the entire obligation of Germany for reparation under articles 231, 232 and 233 of the treaty, as follows:

"This determination is without prejudice to the duty of Germany to make restitution un-der article 238, or to other obligations under the treaty.

"1. Germany will perform in the manner laid down in this schedule her obligations to pay the total fixed in accordance with articles 231, 232 and 233 of the treaty of Versailles by the commission—viz., 132 milliards (132, 000,000,000) of gold marks ($31,416,000,000) less (a) the amount already paid on account of reparations; (b) sums which may from time to time be credited to Germany in respect of state appropriate in caded torritory. respect of state properties in ceded territory. etc., and (c) any sums received from other enemy or ex-enemy powers in respect of which the commission may decide that credits should be given to Germany, plus the amount of the Belgian debt to the allies, the amounts of these deductions and additions to be determined later by the commission. The total amount of German payments in cash, in kind and by cessions of state property up to Dec. 31, 1921, was 6,487,856,000 gold marks ($1,594,009,728).

ARCTIC AND ANTARCTIC EXPLORATION.

AMUNDSEN EXPEDITION.

Capt. Roald Amundsen began another voyage into the arctic regions in the summer of 1922. He started from Nome, Alaska, June 29, in his power schooner Maud and arrived at Deering, on the north side of the Seward peninsula, on July 8. Early in August the ship was frozen in the ice near Wrangel iskand, off the northeastern coast of Siberia. Before this happened Capt. Amundsen, with Lieut. Oscar Omdal, an aviator, and a moving picture operator had transferred to another ship and proceeded to Wainwright, 100-miles southwest of Point Barrow. The explorer had intended to start from this place with Lieut. Omdal on an airplane flight across the north pole to Spitzbergen, or Cape Columbia, but he arrived too late and all the conditions were unfavorable. He therefore decided to remain at Wainwright throughout the winter and attempt his flight in May or June, 1923. The Maud, which before leaving Seattle was fitted out with a powerful radio apparatus, is under command of Capt. Oscar Wisting. Other members of the ship's complement are Carl Hansen, mate: Dr. H. U. Sverdrup and Finn Malmgren, scientists, and G. N. Olonkin and S. Sivertson, engineers.

The expedition, Capt. Amundsen has repeatedly declared, is primarily a scientific age into the arctic regions in the summer of 1922. He started from Nome, Alaska, June pole—he discovered the south pole in 1911—the study of ocean and magnetic currents, the drift of the ice pack and movements of the air will be his first objective.

Special investigation will be made to determine whether land exists in the neighborhood of the pole, as some oceangraphers, basing their belief on sudden shifts in polar ocean currents, have maintained. Much attached the color itself, and ocean currents, have maintained. Much attention will be given to the ocean itself, and through holes bored in the ice scientists of the expedition will measure the depth of the water, direction and strength of submarine currents and take samples from different levels for chemical analysis.

MACMILLAN EXPEDITION.

The schooner Bowdoin, carrying Dr. Donald B. MacMillan and six companions on an exploration trip in the arctic regions, left Wiscasset, Me., July 16 and Halliax, N. S., July 22, 1921. The little ship of only 115 tons was built at East Boothbay, Me., and was named for MacMillan's alma mater. The mapping of Baffin 1. nd was the main purpose of the expedition. The Bowdoin was frozen in on Nov. 9 in a harbor south of the Trinity islands and remained there until Aug. 1, 1922, when it was released and proceeded on its honeward journey. In the fall of 1921 the members of the expedition explored the west coast of Baffin land to a point 78 west longitude, 64 north lattude. Two new islands were discovered off the Melville peninsula. Another large island was discovered thirty miles north of Spicer island. B. MacMillan and six companions on an ex-Meiville peninsula. Another large island was discovered thirty miles north of Spicer island. Some of the islands located on the latest maps were found to be nonexistent. In a letter written Aug. 24, 1922, in Labrador. Dr. MacMillan had the following to say of the work of the expedition in the winter of 1001 1002. 1921-1922:

"We selected the harbor I have named "We selected the harbor I have named Bowdoin after the most painstaking examination of every bay and inlet along the coast. On Nov. 9 we were settled for the winter. We were not idle at Bowdoin harbor. Under the superintendence of Prof. Goddard of Dartmouth college and Carnegie institute we built a magnetic observatory and carried on for a period of tan months on university. for a period of ten months an uninterrupted observation of terrestrial magnetism. We took meteorological observations throughout the year. "The lowest temperature recorded was 60 degrees below zero, Fahrenheit. For two months we took tidal observations. Morever, my men with dog teams traveled more than 2,000 miles, going north to Cape Dorchester, south and east to Lake Harbor and inward to Amadiaak lake, a body of water which had never hitherto been explored by white men. We found the land very different from the current delineations on the latent from the current delineations on the latest maps. Nearly all points are incorrect.

"The waters of Chorbak inlet reach nearly to Fox channel. We discovered a land of uncharted lakes, the breeding place for innumerable ducks, geese, swan and shore birds. Here also lay the hitherto undiscovered home of the lesser snow goose and the blue goose. Eskimos gave us vivid descriptions of an area of about 625 square miles so white with geese that the land appears as if it were covered with snow.

"I have recorded fifty species of birds, and have a good collection of bird skins and eggs. Prof. Robinson has a fine botanical collection of sixty flowering arctic plants."

The Bowdoin arrived at Sydney, N. Sept. 6, 1922, with all on board well.

THE SHACKLETON EXPEDITION.

As noted on page 206, Sir Ernest Shackleton, leader of the expedition to the antarctic regions which left London Sept. 17, 1921, died on Jan. 5, 1922, on board his ship, the Quest, while near the island of South Georgia. This misfortune virtually put are end to the enterprise, although Frank Wild, the second in command, and Frank Worsley attempted to carry out a part of the work planned Moving pictures of bird and animal life were taken and complete geological and biological data gathered in South Georgia. Tristan da Cunha and other remote islands. The Quest was found to be underpowered and otherwise unfitted for antarctic work and it was decided to weturn to Europe. As noted on page 206, Sir Ernest Shackleton, cided to return to Europe,

BLOODLESS REVOLUTION IN ITALY.

The fascisti, under the leadership of Benito Mussolini, obtained complete political control of Italy toward the end of October, 1922. They became known early in 1921 by their conflicts with socialists, communists and radicals of all kinds, Their plan was to meet force with force and to combat the bolshevik tendencies that seemed to be increasing everywhers and to be threatening the economic and political welfare of the state. The name was taken from "fascib," which in turn comes from the Latin word "fascina," meaning a bundle of sticks, or, as used in fortifications, a bundle of fagots or brushwood. The members of the organization, which was more or Victor Emmanuel and made it clear that their a bundle of lagots or brushwood. The members of the organization, which was more or less secret, wore black shirts as their uniform and later the term "black shirt" was used oftener than "fascisti" to designate them.

There were innumerable clashes with the socialists and communists and occasionally with the government troops, though these as a rule and armed men were enrolled.

The cabinet of Luigi Facta resigned Oct. 26 and within the next two or three days the fascisti took possession of Rome and all the other large cities of Italy. In the capital they paraded to the number of 100,000 before King Victor Emmanuel and made it clear that their movement was not antiroyalist or prorepublican. On Oct. 30 Benito Mussolini became premier and in a sense the virtual dictator of Italy. His policies, while called reactionary by his enemies, appeared to please the majority of the Italian people.

the units loyally. The applicants for enlistment have been in excess of the needs. Above all the spirit of co-operation between the national guard and the regular army and the officers' reserve corps has been so good that we are assured of our 'one army' in fact as we have endeavored to arouse an interest in its name. Nothing but finances stand between us and a complete realization of the objects of the act of June 4. 1920. The actual amounts required are not great, and the present indication of enthusiastic support warrants the hope and belief that in a very short time the national guard will be able to reach the proportions required of it in its part of our defense project.

THE ORGANIZED RESERVES.

THE ORGANIZED RESERVES. "Our third and last line of defense consists the organized reserves. The units comof the organized reserves. The units composing this force, according to the basic plan for mobilization, have been allocated to territorial districts throughout the country so that each unit is definitely associated with a particular community. Reserve officers who live in that community are being assigned to particular community. Reserve officers who live in that community are being assigned to its unit. As soon as officers have been assigned it is planned to begin recruiting the unit with carefully selected noncommissioned officers and specialists when these are available. The framework thus created will be of a homogeneous character suitable for the most effective absorption of recruits during mobilization. This framework would, however, prove of slight value unless the officers and noncommissioned officers are given enough training to keep them somewhat informed of their duties. This training we have been unable to give thus far, because of shortage of funds and of regular officers who could handle the instruction. The actual organization of the units was, however, begun early in the fiscal year. Forty-two groups of regular officers and noncommissioned officers were sent out to commence the organization of the divisions and the nondivisional units. The work has been very slow because of the shortage of suitable personnel, funds and facilities. Here again it appears that the tendency to cut our activities for economicareasons is a tendency that should be guarded. We are making progress and any progress is good progress. This progress is, however, scant, and not really enough. Any further cuts would force us to lose what we have agained, and would accordingly be inexcusable. It has taken time and money to build what we have. It has taken blood and money to prove that we have not, even now, what we need. We should when practicable add to what we have and attain to the progress called for in our defense project under the terms of law.

THE DEVELOPMENT OF OFFICERS.

THE DEVELOPMENT OF OFFICERS.
"I shall now give a word to what is really the backbone of our military system. There can be no doubt that our true strength of defense rests upon the foundation of our leadership. I do not belittle the enlisted man—ours is the best in the world. It is because I appreciate him that I emphasize the need for officers who can give to the soldier his best opportunity to fight for his country and for his life. We must have officers sufficient to handle the great army of the United States. We have not these officers now. A very few of them can come from sumcent to handle the great army of the United States. We have not these officers now. A very few of them can come from the military academy—not enough, I believe. Some can come from the ranks. Many can come from the body of officers of the national guard. The greatest part must, however, be reserve officers. We now have a fine body of national guard officers and an equally fine body of reserve officers. In spite of the fact that many of these had service in war, they will quickly become unfit for further service unless they can receive at least a small amount of steady training and education. Our reserve officers are the first to complain that their present lack of training is causing them to lose the knowledge that they gained in the war. Where is their training to come from? Only through the regular officer. From all directions and from all classes is coming the evidence that we have not sufficient regular officers to perform the tasks that are demanded of them, not only by the law, but by our own citizens who desire to see that law realized in fact. In my last annual report I stated that with 18,000 officers authorized we would not have enough to do all that might profitably be done. Now I must state that we have absolutely not enough to do what is necessary to our safety as an organized state. I appreciate the urgency of our financial situation that prevents us from reaching our maximum requirements. I cannot believe, however, that the importance of this need for a minimum strength is fully recognized by all who do recognize the urgency of the financial problems. I earnestly advocate a reconstituting of our officer body to a minimum of 13,000 at the earliest date." United States. We have not these omcers now. A very few of them can come from

"In accordance with the naval appropriation act making provisions for the fiscal year 1923, all but fourteen officers of the naval reserve 30, 1922. The number employed on active duty on Juny 30, 1922. The number employed on active duty on July 1, 1921, was 717, and this number was reduced to fourteen, who are on duty in connection with the reserve force.

in connection with the reserve force. "Including the reserve officers on active duty the officer personnel, line, staff and warrant was reduced from 9.509 on July 1, 1921, to 7,855 on June 30, 1922, a net reduction of approximately 17 per cent.

"Two of the large problems which the department had to solve have been the relief of all reserve officers manning the auxiliaries and the decommissioning of the destroyers with the consequent changes of officer personnel. The release of the reserve officers required approximately 380 regular active officers to perform the duties formerly performed by the reservists. The decommissioning of the destroyers did not materially reduce the existing shortage of officers, as the destroyers on both coasts were greatly underofficered. To officer the reduced operating force plan for the year 1922-23 there are required 5.700 line officers and there are available but 4,200. This number does not allow for any emergencies or for performing additional duties not specified under forming additional duties not specified under the operating force plan for the coming year. Because of the frequent changes and the un-settled conditions that have existed it has been impossible to maintain permanency in the offi-cer personnel. The authorized number of line officers is 5,499. On June 30, 1922, there were 4,436 line officers in the service, leaving a shortage of 1,100.

NAVAL RESERVE FORCE.

"On June 30, 1922, the personnel of the naval reserve force consisted of 5,340 officers and 10,966 men. The marked decrease in numbers during the year was due to the gen-eral disenrollment of all classes, except class 1, which took place on Sept. 30, 1921, due to the lack of appropriation for the payment of retainer pay. Practically all members of classes 2, 3, 4 and 5 were disenrolled or placed in an inactive status, and class 6 now consists largely of former members of the above-mentioned classes who maintained their connection with the naval reserve by transferring their enrollments to that class, and thus forms the nucleus of the volunteer naval reserve.

ENLISTED PERSONNEL.

"The naval appropriation bill for the fiscal year 1922 was not approved until July 12. 1921, and the amount carried in this bill for the pay of the enlisted force was insufficient for the annual pay of 100,000 men and 6,000 apprentice scamen, for which congress had apprentice scamen. For which congress had apprentice scamen. apprentice seamen, for which congress had apparently intended to appropriate. There were in the navy on this date 113,103 men and it was estimated that the appropriation for pay would permit of an average number for the year of about 100,000 men only. It was necessary, therefore, to take steps for a prompt reduction of enlisted personnel in order to avoid a deficiency in pay. Accordingly all first en-listments were stopped and on July 18, 1921. instructions were issued to all commanding officers to grant discharges immediately to men who so requested within three months of expiration of their enlistments. The total numpiration of their enlistments. ber of men in the service was reduced by this means to 100,910 by September, 1921.

"On Sept. 30, 1921, there were 12,327 chief petty officers, or 2,575 in excess of the number required for an enlisted force of 100,000 men. This was the result of a very great expansion of the navy during the war, when it was called upon to man the transports, auxiliaries, the navy officers' training school vessels and to furnish armed guards to all the merchant ships in the Atlantic trade. At the time of demobilization these men were turned back into the regular service in the ratings which they held, and as a much smaller proportion of chief petty officers desired their discharges than men of lower ratings an excess of chief petty officers resulted.

"In order to reduce this excess of chief petty officers commanding officers were directed to grant discharge by special order to any chief petty officer who so requested, without regard to vacancies created in complement. As the result of this order 1.219 chief petty officers were discharged by July 1, 1922. The excess of chief petty officers was further increased when former enlisted men holding temporary commissions and warrants reverted to their former enlisted status. The law in regard to this became effective Dec. 31, 1921, and during the year a total of 791 men so reverted, of whom fully 98 per cent were chief petty offi-

"By the operation of the various orders relative to discharges it was estimated that the limit of 86,000 men, authorized by congress in the current appropriation bill, would be reached by July 1, 1922, and it was the desire of the department to start out the year with as nearly that number as possible. There had been inserted in the appropriation bill provisions relative to the transfer of men into the visions relative to the transfer of men into the fleet naval reserve in order to effect the required reduction without working unnecessary hardship on individual men who had given the government years of faithful service. As the men most entitled to consideration were those who had served longest, and as these were generally chief petty officers, the department was able, by extending the benefits of the provisions of the bill to such men, to reduce the total number to the required 86,000 and at the same time reduce the excess in and at the same time reduce the excess in chief petty officer ratings.

"On June 30, 1922, there were in the service

89,513 men, including approximately 2,600 men who were later transferred to the fleet naval reserve under the naval appropriation act.

THE MARINE CORPS.

"Although the amount appropriated for the maintenance of the marine corps for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1922, was over $5,000,000 less than the sum provided for the preceding fiscal year no deficiency was incurred. The accomplishment of this task was effected only by the most careful economy along all lines and by the thorough co-operation of all hands. to this economical administration and ty co-operation of officers and men hearty hearty co-operation of olineers and men throughout the marine corps it was even pos-sible to defray out of the current funds the additional expense incurred by reason of the mail guard duty, amounting to $416.780.96. In 1921 there occurred a series of daring robberies in which the government suffered losses running into millions of dollars, these robberies being principally from registered mail convexed in trains and trucks throughout the United States. In spite of extreme precautions adopted and an increase in personnel in the postoffice department for guards and in the postoffice department for guards and protection the situation assumed such serious proportions that the postmaster-general on Nov. 8, 1921, requested the services of the marines as guardians of the United States mails. This request was immediately compiled with and a force of approximately fifty-three officers and 2,200 men was dispatched throughout the country on this responsible and arduous duty. Marines were detailed to accompany mail trucks as guards, in mail coaches and at outlying points in postoffies and distributing stations."

The commander of the United States marine corps is Maj.-Gen. John A. Lejeune.

ARMY AND NAVY PAY.

The act of June 10, 1922, readjusted the annual pay of the commissioned officers and enlisted men of the army and navy and marine corps. This act is given in full beginning on page 318 of this volume. The pay of some of the higher ranks is as follows:

THE SAGE FOUNDATION.

March 12, 1907, Mrs. Russell Sage of New York announced that she had set aside the sum of $10,000,000 to be known as the Sage Foundation and to be devoted to the improvement of the social and living conditions in the United States.

Following is a part of the statement given out by Mrs. Sage as to the object of the gift: "I have set aside $10,000,000 for the endowment of this foundation. Its object is the improvement of social and living conditions in the United States. The means to that end will include research, publication, education, the establishment and maintenance of charitable and beneficial activities, agencies and institutions and the aid of any such activities, agencies and institutions already established."

The general director of the fund is John M. Glenn. Office, 130 East 22d street, New York, N. Y.

Note—Total for street railways, shipping waterworks, etc., includes $402.351.858, value of ships belonging to the United States navy, and $290.000,000, value of privately owned water supply systems, not distributed by states.

The national wealth of the United States is estimated by the United States census bureau at $187,739,000,000, or $1,965 for each man, woman and child in the country. The total includes the value of all kinds of real, personal and other property, taxable and exempt, in the United States exclusive of Alaska, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippines. Omitting the value of property exempt from taxation for the reason that it was not included in the figures for 1850, 1860 and

ROSENWALD RURAL SCHOOLS.

Julius Rosenwald of Chicago during the last eight years has given $1,107,000 toward the construction of 1.633 rural schoolhouses for negroes in fourteen southern states. This aid has been furnished on the fundamental coudition that the negroes themselves, through their own contributions, from white friends or from public funds, raise an amount equal to or larger than that furnished by Mr. Rosenwald through the Julius Rosenwald fund.

Rosenwald through the Julius Rosenwald fund. On this co-operative plan, up to Nov. 20, 1922, 1,633 schoolhouses, utilizing the services of 3,807 teachers and providing for 171,000 pupils, were built at a total cost of approximately $5,700,000. Of this amount the negroes gave about $1,510,000, the whites $345,000, the public funds $2,738,000 and Mr. Rosenwald $1,107,000. Classified by types the buildings include 443 one-teacher schools, 618 two-teacher schools, 262 three-teacher schools, 153 four-teacher schools, 518 five-teacher schools, 52 schools above six-teacher and 37 teachers homes. homes.

$1,107,478 ROSENWALD AID TO NEGRO Y. M. C. A
AND Y. W. C. A.

Julius Rosenwald in 1910 offered, through the Chicago Y. M. C. A., to give $25,000 toward the cost of a negro Y. M. C. A. building for men and boys in any city of the United States which, by popular subscriptions, would raise $75,000 additional, thus assuring a building to cost complete a minimum of $100,000. Under this offer buildings were erected at a cost of $2,150,000 in thirteen cities, having a total negro population of one million cities, having a total negro population one million.

In 1920 Mr. Rosenwald made a second offer to contribute $25,000 to any city raising not less than $125,000, being influenced by interest awakened in Akron, O., Dayton, O., Detroit, Jersey City, Augusta, Ga., Montclair, N. J., Atlantic City, Orange, N. J., Los Angeles, Nashville and Chicago for a second building, Owing to the excessive cost and adverse conditions no city had qualified up to Nov. 15, 1922, but the Chicago Y. M. C. A. reported that Atlantic City, which had bought a site for $50,000, intended inaugurating a campaign for building funds in the spring of 1923; also that Detroit, Jersey City and Dayton might soon quality.

1923; also that Detroit, Jersey City and Dayton might soon qualify.

Mr. Rosenwald gave $25,000 toward the cost of a Y. W. C. A. building erected in New York and he promised $25,000 to a Y. W. C. A. building now under construction in Philadelphia. There is no general offer to aid Y. W. C. A's, New York and Philadelphia presenting exceptional situations.

DEATH OF JOHN WANAMAKER.

DEATH OF JOHN WANAMAREM.
John Wanamaker, merchant, philanthropist and leader in civic, industrial, political and religious affairs, died at his home in Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 12, 1922. He was born in that city July 11, 1838, and spent his whole life there, the greater part of the time as the head of a great clothing and department store. He was postmaster general of the United States in the cabinet of President Harrison, 1889-1893, but held no other public office of im-portance. Many hospitals and educational and religious institutions benefited largely from his philanthropy.

PROPOSED NEW CONSTITUTION OF ILLI-NOIS REJECTED.

In accordance with its terms, the proposed new state constitution for Illinois was submit-ted to the voters of the state for adoption or rejection at an election held on Tuesday, Dec. 12, 1922. The result was the defeat by a decisive majority of the new basic law framed by the constitutional convention and signed by the officers and members at Springfield Sept. 12, 1922. The text of the rejected con-stitution will be found on page 760 of this volume.

REDUCTION OF ARMAMENTS.

Among the questions on which action was taken was that of the reduction of land and naval armaments. At the session of Sept. 26 taken was that of the reduction of land and naval armaments. At the session of Sept. 26 the following proposal by Lord Robert Cecil from the temporary mixed commission was adopted:

"1. No scheme for the reduction of armaments can ever be really successful unless it is general. "2. In the present state of the world the majority of governments would be unable to accept the responsibility for a serious reduction of armaments unless they received in exchange a satisfactory guaranty of the safety exchange a satisfactory guaranty of the safety of their countries.

"3. Such a guaranty can be found in a general defensive agreement between all the countries concerned, binding them to provide immediate and effective assistance in accordance with a prearranged plan in the event of one of them being attacked, provided that the obligation to render assistance to a country attacked shall be limited in principle to those scentifics situated in the same part of the attacked shall be limited in principle to those countries situated in the same part of the globe. In cases, however, where, for historical, geographical or other reasons, a country is in special danger of attack, detailed arrangements should be made for its defense in accordance with the above-mentioned plan.

"4. It is understood that the whole of the above resolutions are conditioned on a reducabove resolutions are conditioned on a reduction of armaments being carried out on lines laid down beforehand, and on the provision of effective machinery to insure the realization and the maintenance of such reduction."

M. de Jouvenel of France suggested the following method of reduction which there are lowing method of reduction, which was approved:

"The committee recommends that as a pre-liminary step the European states existing before the war under the present description, whose legal position has not been modified by the war and which are not at this moment the war and which are not at this moment engaged in military operations justifying their armaments, be invited to reduce their total military, naval and air expenditure to the fig-ures for 1913, calculated on the basis of prewar prices according to the method followed by the temporary mixed commission." M. de Jouvenel further submitted the fol-lowing proposition, which was adopted:

"Considering that moral disarmament is an essential condition of material disarmament, and that this moral disarmament can only be achieved in an atmosphere of mutual confidence and security;

Declares that such confidence cannot be attained so long as the world continues to suffer from disorganization of the exchanges, economic chaos and unemployment, and that the only method of remedying these evils is to put an end to the uncertainty which prevails regarding the means for the restoration of the devastated regions and the settlement of the interallied debts:

"And it further recommends that the council

And it further recommends that the council shall devote constant attention to every effort made in this direction by the governments con-cerned, it being understood that it can only usefully assist in the solution of these problems if requested to do so by the governments in question.

NAVAL ARMAMENTS.

On the question of naval armaments the following resolution was adopted:

"1. The assembly recommends that the principles of the Washington naval treaty should be extended to all states nonsignatory of that treaty, whether members of the league or not.

"2. It recommends that an international conference should be summoned by the council as soon as possible, to which all states, whether members of the league or not, should be invited with a view to considering the exwhether members of the league or not, should be invited, with a view to considering the extension of the principles of the Washington convention to all states nonsignatory of that treaty, it being understood that any special cases, including that of new states, shall be given consideration at the conference.

"3. It recommends that the report of the temporary mixed commission, together with the report and the draft convention prepared by the permanent advisory commission should by the permanent advisory commission, should be forwarded immediately to the various gov-ernments for consideration."

CONCILIATION COMMISSIONS.

With a view to promoting the development of the procedure of conciliation in the case of international disputes the assembly rec-ommended that members of the assembly con-clude agreements with the object of laying their disputes before conciliation commissions formed by themselves. They were advised to adopt the following rules based on the Hague convention of Oct. 18, 1907:

Article 1. The conciliation commission shall be constituted as follows:

Each party shall appoint two members, from among its own nationals, the other from among the nationals of a third state. The among the nationals of a third state. The two parties shall jointly appoint the chairman of the commission from among the nationals of a third state. The parties may appoint the members of the commission beforehand and for a period which they themselves shall determine. They may also confine themselves to appointing only the chairman beforehand, in which case the other members shall be appointed after a consultation with the chair. pointed after a consultation with the chairman at the moment when a dispute arises, their mandate being limited to the settlement of such dispute.

The secretaries and staff of the Secretariat shall be appointed by the Secretary General with the approval of the Council.

The Secretary General shall act in that capacity at all meetings of the Assembly and of the Council.

The expenses of the Secretariat shall be borne by the Members of the League in accordance with the apportionment of the expenses of the International Bureau of the Universal Postal Union.

Article 7.

The Seat of the League is established at Geneva.

The Council may at any time decide that the Seat of the League shall be established elsewhere.

All positions under or in connection with the League, including the Secretariat, shall be open equally to men and womeu.

Representatives of the Members of the League and officials of the League when engaged on the business of the League shall enjoy diplomatic privileges and immunities.

The buildings and other property occupied by the League or its officials or by Representable attending its meetings shall be inviolable.

The Members of the League recognise that the maintenance of peace requires the reduction of national armaments to the lowest point consistent with national safety and the enforcement by common action of international obligations.

The Council, taking account of the geo-graphical situation and circumstances of each State, shall formulate plans for such reduction for the consideration and action of the several Governments.

Governments, Such plans shall be subject to reconsidera-tion and revision at least every ten years. After these plans shall have been adopted by the several Governments, the limits of armaments therein fixed shall not be exceeded without the concurrence of the Council. In the event of a dispute between a Member of the League and a State which is not a Member of the League, or between States not Members of the League, the State or States not Members of the League shall be invited to accept the obligations of membership in the League for the purposes of such dispute, upon such conditions as the Council may deem just. If such invitation is accepted, the provisions of Articles 12 to 16 inclusive shall be applied with such modifications as may be deemed necessary by the Council. the Council.

Upon such invitation being given the Council shall immediately institute an inquiry into the circumstances of the dispute and recommend such action as may seem best and most effectual in the circumstances.

If a State so invited shall refuse to accept the obligations of membership in the League for the purposes of such dispute and shall resort to war against a Member of the League, the provisions of Article 16 shall be applicable as against the State taking port, and shall make no recommendation as to its settlement.

The Council may in any case under this Article refer the dispute to the Assembly. The dispute shall be so referred at the request of either party to the dispute, provided that such request be made within fourteen days after the submission of the dispute to the Council. In any case referred to the Assembly, all the provisions of this Article and of Article 12 may case referred to the Assembly, all the relating to the action and powers of the Council settlement of the dispute.

THE GREEK-TURKISH CONFLICT.

The war between Greece and Turkey, which was an outcome of the world war and the treaty of Sevres, resulted in 1922 in the com-plete overthrow of the Greek armies in Asia Minor by the Turkish nationalist forces under Mustapha Kemal Pasha, and a revolution in Greece, which led to the exiling of King Con-stantine and his brother Andrew and the scannine and his prother Andrew and the execution of a number of prominent cabinet ministers and others held responsible for the war and its outcome. In 1921 the Greeks began a campaign on March 29 which was at first successful, but ended in a reverse. They tried it again in June but with the came refirst successful, but ended in a reverse. They tried it again in June, but with the same result. Operations were suspended during the winter, but were resumed in the summer of 1922. The Greeks had some minor successes, but on Aug. 29 the Turks began an offensive which speedlly resulted in the defeat of the Greeks and their evacuation of the territory they had held in the vicinity of Eskishehr, Karahissar and Smyrna. The Greek armies appeared to be badly led and soon became democralized came demoralized.

On Sept. 9 the Turks occupied Smyrna, On Sept. 9 the Turks occupied Smyrna, which four days later was the scene of a fire which made 60.000 Greeks and Armenians homeless. It was reported that more than 1,200 of these people were massacred by Turkish irregulars. The Turks hurried on toward Constantineple and invaded the neutral zone established by the allies. The British, at Chanak and other points, maintained their positions firmly until the Turks agreed to an armistice and the holding of a preliminary conference at Mudania. This began Oct. 3 and ended Oct. 10 in an agreement that the Greeks should evacuate eastern Thrace and turn it should evacuate eastern Thrace and turn it over to the Turks, and that Constantinople should be governed by nationalist and allied officials. It was also agreed that a peace conference should be held to make the final arrangements and decide such questions as the control of the Dardanelles, the Bosporus and the Black sea and other details.

SULTAN DETHRONED.

Sultan Mohammed VI, was dethroned by the most prominent.

nationalist assembly at Angora on Nov. 3, and fearing for his life he fled from Constantinople Nov. 17 on a British warship and took refuge on the island of Malta. Aldul Medjid Effendi was immediately elected caliph of the Mohammedan world, but without temporal authority, and on Nov. 24 was installed in his office in Constantinople.

The surrender of eastern Thrace to the Turks caused a panic among the Greek residents and virtually all of them fled to western Thrace and Greece. The Greeks and Armenians in Asia Minor also fled by the thousands and Greece was almost coronially distinct the surrendered in the and Greece was almost overwhelmed in the effort to take care of the refugees.

REVOLUTION IN GREECE. The crushing of the Greek armies in Asia Minor led to a military coup detat in Greece on Sept. 27. Army and naval officers planned and carried out a bloodless revolution, resulting in the abdication and exile of King Constantine on the date named, the placing of Crown Prince George on the throne and the assumption of authority by a small group of military men, led by Col. Gonitas, Col. Plastivas and Col. Phocas. The ministers and others held responsible for the war against the Turks were arrested, tried by court-martial and sentenced to death. On the morning of Nov. 28 on the outskirts of Athens, M. Gounaris, M. Stratos, M. Protopapadakis, M. Baltazzi, M. Theotokis and Gen. Hadjanestis were shot to death by a firing squad. Prince Andrew was ordered to leave Greece.

LAUSANNE PEACE CONFERENCE. Delegates empowered to arrange permanent peace in the near east met in Lausanne, Swit-zerland, Nov. 20. The United States was rep-resented unofficially by Ambassador Child and Minister Grew, and though they acted merely as observers their influence on the proceedings was considerable. Ismet Pasha and Nouri Bey were the principal Turkish delegates, while among those who took an active part in the discussion Lord Curzon of Great Britain and Commissar Tchitcherin of Russia were the

THIRD (EXTRA) SESSION OF THE 67TH CONGRESS.

Walters

For the purpose of beginning early consideration of the merchant marine bill, popularly known as the ship-subsidy bill, the 67th congress was called into extra session, beginning Nov. 20, 1922, and ending a few minutes before the opening of the regular session, Dec. 4. On Nov. 21 President Harding appeared before a joint session of both houses and delivered a message strongly urging the passage of the merchant marine bill. The message is given in full, beginning on page 612 of this volume.

The bill came to a vote in the house on Nov. 29 and was passed with 208 members for and 184 against the measure on the final roll call. Sixty-nine republicans voted against the bill and only four democrats for it.

In a decision announced Nov. 13, 1922, the United States Supreme court held that Japanese cannot be naturalized or become citizens of the United States. The only persons of Japanese blood who may have the right of citizenship are those born in the United States. The decision was handed down in a case brought by Takao Ozawa, who in 1914 applied for citizenship in Hawaii.

CENTER OF NEGRO POPULATION.

by the bureau of the census on the basis of by the pureau of the census on the basis of the fourteenth census enumeration, taken Jan. 1, 1920, is located in latitude 34° 46′ 52″ and longitude 85° 30′ 48″, being in the extreme northwestern corner of Georgia, in Dade country, about 1% miles north-northeast of Rising Flavor town, and that four the first time in t ty, about 1% miles north-northeast of Rising Fawn town, and that for the first time in the history of the country this center has moved northeast, being approximately 9.4 miles farther east and 19.4 miles farther north in 19?0 than it was in 1910. Its former movements have all been in a southwesterly direction. In 1790 it was located 25 miles west-southwest of Petersburg, Dinwiddie country, Virginia, and 100 years later, in 1890, it had moved southwest 463 miles, to a point 15.7 miles southwest 463 miles, to a point 15.7 miles southwest of Lafayette, Walker country, Ga., the same county in which it was located in 1880. Between 1890 and 1900 it crossed the state line into Alabama, its location in 1900 and again in 1910 being in DeKalb country. Ala-

has brought it back to the state of Georgia.

The northeasterly movement of the center of negro population between 1910 and 1920 is due principally to the great increase in the negro population of Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania. West Virginia, Ohio, Indiana and Michigan. The total increase in the negro population of the United States was 635,368 and it will be control to the control of th noted that the increase in the northern states mentioned was 56 per cent of the total increase. This northward movement of the negro crease. This northward movement of the Absorption was due mainly to the expansion of certain industries during the world war, the bick wages paid being the attraction. It is probably true that there has been a considerable return movement since the war, due to the depression in certain industries, and that a large number of negroes have moved south to their former homes.

GOV. LEN SMALL ACQUITTED.

Len Small, governor, and Fred E. Sterling, lieutenant-governor, of Illinois were indicted by the Sangamon county grand jury July 20, 1921, on charges of embezzling state funds and conspiracy to defraud the state when they held the office of state treasurer in 1917-1919 and 1919-1921 respectively. Vernon S. Curtis of Grant Park, Ill., one of the owners of the "Grant Park bank." was named jointly with the state officials mentioned in two of the four true bills returned.

Formal application for a change of venue

four true bills returned.

Formal application for a change of venue from the court of Judge Elbert S. Smith and from Sangamon county was filed in the Circuit court in Springfield Aug. 16, 1921, on behalf of Gov. Small. State's Attorney Mortimer and lawyers representing the governor finally agreed that the case should be tried in Lake county and it was sent there Oct. 11 by Judge Frank W. Burton of Carlinville, sitting in Springfield. The change of venue applied only to the Small and Curtis cases. Lieut-Gov. Sterling did not ask for a change.

On Dec. 29 Judge Claire C. Edwards of the Lake county Circuit court decided that Gov. Small must stand trial on charges of conspiracy to defraud. The embezzlement count was quashed. Jan. 31 Judge Edwards granted the petition of Small and Curtis for separate trials. The trial of Gov. Small finally began in Waukegan April 24. The jury was completed May 10 and the taking of testimony began on the following day. On June 19 the state closed its case and C. C. LeForgee, chief counsel for the defendant, announced that he would rest the case on the evidence for the prosecution. On June 24 the jury, after taking two ballots, found Gov. Small not guilty of the charges on which he was tried.

The civil suits against the governor and lieutenant-governor for restitution of interest on state funds came up before Circuit Judge on state funds came up before Circuit Judga Norman L. Jones in Carrollton in September, but no conclusion had been reached when this edition of The Daily News Almanac and Year-Book went to press.

FALL OF BRITISH COALITION CABINET.

The coalition cabinet headed by David Lloyd George, which carried Great Britain through the greater part of the world war and the difficult years immediately after, came to an end Oct. 19, 1922, when the prime minister handed his resignation to the king. Andrew Bonar Law, unionist, accepted the responsibility of forming a new cabinet, most of the members of which went into office Oct. 25. Lord Curzon was appointed secretary of state for foreign affairs and leader of the house for foreign affairs and leader of the house of lords: Stanley Balwin, chancellor of the exchequer; the earl of Derby, secretary of state for war; L. C. M. S. Avery, first lord of the admiralty; Viscount Peel, secretary for India, and the duke of Devonshire, secretary for the colonies.

The change of cabinets was followed by a general election on Nov. 15, which resulted in giving the Bonar Law government a working giving the Bonar Law government a working majority of seventy-one. The division of parties as announced some days after the election was as follows: Unionists, 341; national liberals, 54; liberals, 60; laborites, 143; independent unionists, 3; independents, 4; cooperatives, 2; nationalists, 2; communist, 1; Sinn Fein, 1; results to come, 4; total, 615; unionist majority over all other parties, 71.

TOTAL VOTE AND VOTE ON PROPOSITIONS.

(By wards in Chicago and by towns outside.)

Two propositions were submitted to the voters at the Nov. 7 election in Chicago, Cook county and Illinois. One was a proposal to authorize a bond issue for a soldiers' bonus and required a majority of all votes cast for members of the lower branch of the state legislature. The other was a declaration of sentiment on beer and wine under the public policy act and required merely a majority of the votes cast on the proposal to indicate the prevailing sentiment. This last vote is not legally binding. The vote on the bond issue is. The binding. The vote on the bond issue is. The official proposal for a bond issue as it appeared printed on the ballots follows:

"Shall the state of Illinois contract a debt of "Shall the state of links contract a deep of $55,000,000 and issue bonds to that amount and levy annually a direct tax sufficient to pay the interest on such bonds as it shall accrue and to pay off and discharge the principal of such bonds within twenty years from issuance, in accordance with the provisions of an act of the general assembly of Illinois entitled 'An the general assembly of Illinois entitled 'An act to provide payment of compensation to certain persons who served with the military or naval forces of the United States in the recent war with Germany'?"

The question of public policy submitted follows:

"Shall the existing state and federal prohibitory laws be modified so as to permit the manufacture, sale and transportation of beer (containing less than 4 per cent by volume of alcohol) and light wines for home consumption?" tion?

With the vote on these two propositions in Chicago and Cook county is also printed for convenience the total vote cast in the election. The three are combined in the following table:

It was announced July 28, 1922, at Washington D. C., that the United States had accorded American recognition to Esthonia, Latvia, Lithuania and Albania. The three first named were formed from former Russian dominions.

PROPOSED NEW CONSTITUTION OF ILLINOIS.

(At the election Dec. 12, 1922, the new basic law was rejected.)

In accordance with an act passed by the 51st general assembly and approved June 21, 1919, providing for a convention to revise the state constitution of Illinois, 102 delegates—two from each senatorial district—were elected Nov. 4, 1919. These delegates met in Springfield Jan. 6, 1920, and organized by electing Charles E. Woodward of Ottawa as president and Bert H. McCann of Bloomington as sectory. Committees were amounted and an retary. Committees were appointed and an order of procedure was established. Sessions were held at intervals throughout a sessions were held at intervals throughout 1920, 1921 and in 1922 until June 28, when the revision was completed and the constitution adopted for submission to the people for ratification at a special election to be held Dec. 12, 1922. Following is an official copy of the constitution in its revised form:

CONSTITUTION OF ILLINOIS.

Preamble.

We, the people of the state of Illinois, grateful to Almighty God for the civil, political and religious liberties which He hath so long permitted us to enjoy and looking to so fong permitted us to enjoy and tooking to Him for a blessing upon our endeavors to secure and transmit them unimpaired to succeeding generations, in order to form a more perfect government, establish justice, insure domestic tranquillity, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this constitution.

ARTICLE I. Bill of Rights.

Section 1. All men are by nature free and independent and have certain inherent and inalienable rights; among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. To secure these rights and the protection of property, govern-ments are instituted among men deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. A frequent recurrence to the fundamental principles of civil government is necessary to preserve the blessings of liberty.
